SILVER PLANE ALIGHTS GRACEFULLY

BEARING THE FAMOUS FLIER LINDBERGH TO ST. LOUIS HOME

Haze Fills Sky Above River
Metropolis—"Same Slim"
Old Pals Declare Gleeefully
But He Looks Tired, Is After Thought—Given
Tumultuous Welcome—Throngs Atop All Buildings Shout.

A graceful silver monoplane, trailed by a work worn biplane of the United States Air Mail service, hummed suddenly out of the deep haze hanging over Lambert-St. Louis field at 3:32 o'clock Friday afternoon and five minutes later Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was home.

Of all the planes up to meet the world-acclaimed hero, only that piloted by a buddy of the air mail service from which the young history maker is on leave, was able to find him in the murky 15 miles between the flying field and St. Louis.

It was flown by Philip R. (Red) Love and carried an Associated Press correspondent as a passenger.

Hundreds of thousands of St. Louisans, grouped on roofs, river banks and in open spaces had cheered "Lucky Slim" to an echo, perhaps inaudible to him, as for 20 minutes he maneuvered his "Spirit of St. Louis" over the downtown and residential district, cavorting in sweeps and swirls of sheer joy at being again over his own hometown.

But it remained for Love to be the first to greet the intrepid king of the air and guide him to Lambert-St. Louis field, where 5,000 drain drenched men and women, including the world-famed young flier's mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lodge Lindbergh, and Dwight F. Davis, of St. Louis, secretary of war, waited to greet him. The crowd which might well have numbered 200,000, was held to the comparatively handful by strict injunction of the arrangements committee to keep away from the flying field.

St. Louis' public acclaim for the youth who has spread its fame before the eyes of the world for more than a month since he hopped from San Diego and thence to New York for his epochal solo flight to Paris was saved for Saturday and Sunday, when all the honors that a grateful city and state can bestow will be heaped upon those which already have been showered upon him at home and abroad.

Friday night "Slim"—that's his St. Louis name, "Lindy" being awarded far afield—rested in the home of one of the men who with a half dozen others "chipped in with him" to finance the transatlantic flight.

There was nothing on his program except a few hours with his mother, an informal dinner and rest against the two strenuous days immediately ahead.

Colonel Lindbergh left New York for his trip home at 6:17 o'clock St. Louis time Friday morning and, as if reluctant to come down, prolonged his flight until he had been in the air nine hours and 20 minutes, as against seven hours and 15 minutes for his hop east May 12.

St. Louis received back pretty much the same old "Slim" it sent away a few weeks ago to conquer space and distance in an achievement which will ring thru the ages. He still was rather diffident, apparently somewhat confused by the honors accorded to him, considerate of the interests of others and smiling vigorous with the lightness of his load of 25 years, but to those who knew him best—the air mail fliers and the mechanics of Lambert-St. Louis field, there was a slight, subtle change.

Hurting out of the clouds, which restricted vision to the very edge of the 200 acre flying field, Colonel Lin-

bergh was upon his welcomers before they realized it was he. He had dropped his convoy of 32 planes at Scott field, Belleville, Illinois, 25 miles from St. Louis and was winging it home in lonely majesty until Love picked him up.

The crowd had expected to see the ace of the air swoop down attended by the ships which had accompanied him from Wilbur Wright field, Dayton, Ohio, in the world's greatest long-distance air parade.

The 5,000 at the field sent up a wild shout when it was realized "Slim" was home, mingling with it the roaring of automobile and airship exhausts and the honking of automobile horns. What they lacked in numbers they apparently sought to make up for in enthusiasm.

Then there went up a relieved cheer. Another rent the air when Lindbergh opened the door of his plane and slowly crawled out, apparently as fresh as a daisy excepting for a smudge of grease along one cheek. There was a continuation of cheering at his every movement—while he performed the double function of unlimbering and walking up and down for photographs, while he shook hands with some of his backers in the flight, while he was being greeted by his mother and while he walked to the automobile in which he was whisked away from the field within 10 minutes after he landed.

CHEESE MONUMENT

The monument erected in the little town of Camembert, France, to Mnie. Harel, the first maker of the cheese that has made itself world famous. Quite appropriately a box of the cheese was placed at the base of the shaft.

Keeps Something Back

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires
By Correspondents of the United States Press
Association.

Gallipolis — J. E. Carpenter lock-master, at government dam No. 25, in Ohio river at Addison near here has been appointed overseer of all locks and dams between Wheeling and Huntington. Carpenter stated today that river transportation will soon surpass all railroad combines in Ohio Valley. Thousands of tons of freight in barges and on packets are transported every month on the upper Ohio river and more boats of steel are to be built.

Cleveland — Victory perched today on the banners of Superintendent C. C. Pierce of Rocky river after the first skirmish in the village's high school "war." In a meeting surcharged with threats and heated arguments several hundred village residents gave Pierce a vote of confidence. Following the session, which had been called to sift criticism of Pierce for alleged discipline of a high school boy, the superintendent announced he would not offer his resignation.

Forces opposed to Pierce were in the meeting, including all members of the school board except one.

Cleveland — Altho the state has room for 750 insane and feeble-minded patients at homes in Columbus and Orient, "Red Tape" prevents transfer of an overflow of nearly 500 from Cleveland State hospital for the insane, members of the Cleveland Mental Hygiene committee were told today. Dr. Guy H. Williams, superintendent of the hospital, city welfare director, Dudley S. Blossom, Dr. Alan R. Finlayson of Lakeside hospital and other speakers scored the city's lack of facilities for the proper care of the insane.

Dayton — Dr. Harry H. McClelland, for the past four years superintendent of the Dayton State hospital, tendered his resignation to John E. Harper, director state public welfare department. The resignation, effective July 1, was accepted. Dr. McClelland resigned to accept the newly created position of managing director of Ohio association for the welfare of the mentally sick.

Mrs. Obert Kuhn, who resides near Leistville, fell in the yard of her home Thursday and sustained a fracture of her left arm at the wrist. Dr. Henneger reduced the fracture and brought his patient to this city Saturday and took an X-Ray of the broken member at Dr. Courtright's office.

CONGRESSMAN COOPER NAMED FOR GOVERNOR

Political Pot Begins to Boil
and Candidates are Coming in the Open.

Word, which reaches Columbus from Washington, places National Representative John G. Cooper, of Youngstown, congressman from the 19th Ohio district, much in the light as the Republican nominee for governor next year.

Those who have just returned from the National Capital say his name is being seriously discussed by the party leaders there and the belief is strong among many that he would be the most available man to select, even stronger than Congressman James J. Begg of Sandusky, representing the 13th district.

The argument being used in behalf of Cooper is his pronounced support of all dry measures and his consistent advocacy of woman's suffrage. This it is believed, would give him the unqualified endorsement of the Anti-Saloon league and all dry supporters and the enthusiastic vote of the Republican women and the followers of woman's suffrage. It is declared he could enter the campaign with these elements at his command more than any other man.

This announcement from Washington was received in Columbus with gratification among those who have been urging the name of the Youngstown congressman ever since the defeat of Myers Y. Cooper, of Cincinnati, Republican gubernatorial nominee, in the election of last year.

A movement in Cooper's behalf was started immediately following this and has steadily increased in strength since. This is especially true among women and several who are prominent in political and club work have openly advocated him and urged his candidacy as holding out the best promise of success at the polls. These women are now devoting themselves more assiduously than before to pushing his name forward and several Cooper clubs are to be organized within a short time.

It is possible he will be brought to Columbus by some women's organizations to deliver addresses with the belief that the better acquainted he becomes with the members of these the more enthusiastic his support will be.

Soot From Smudge Pots Colors Grave Monuments

Toppenish, Wash.—Sextons are busy with sponge and chamols cleaning grave monuments after the sootfall from the smudge pots burned in central Washington to fight off frost. Polished granite has an affinity for heavy soot and most of the tombstones in cemeteries resembled charred tree trunks in fire-swept forests. The heavy smoke and soot did much temporary damage, but through it all the fruit and prosperity were both saved to the apple growers.

Honey Burden Weighs Down Roof of House

Gomshall, England.—There's so much honey in the roof of a Fifteenth-century farmhouse here, called "Cole Kitchen farm," that the ceiling of the room immediately underneath is giving way beneath the weight after 100 years' service as a gigantic beehive.

T. H. English, the owner, says nobody ever tried to get the honey because it would necessitate removing the roof.

In the swarming season the place is smothered with bees.

LILLIPUTIAN MURDERER IS ELECTROCUTED

Leo Halterman Diminutive
Slayer Was Put to Death
Friday Night.

Mumbling an incoherent prayer and with a half smile fitting across his face, Leo Halterman, 27, the shortest man ever electrocuted in Ohio penitentiary, met death in the electric chair Friday night.

Before he died for the murder of his half brother and the latter's wife at South Solon, December 23, he delivered a rather lengthy speech, in a voice unshaken by emotional fear, in which he professed his belief in Jesus Christ.

Halterman, who was four feet, eight inches tall, entered the death chamber with Captain T. O. Reed, about 8:50 p. m.

Good-bye chaplain," he said to Chaplain Reed, "Pray for my children."

An extra strap was necessary to hold Halterman's legs firm, just above the knees. An extra pair of blocks had been placed just below the seat of the chair to brace his legs below the knees. His feet cleared the floor by eight inches.

He was pronounced dead at 8:57. In the southwest corner of the death house was Art Graham, Columbus real estate dealer and lifelong friend of Halterman's family. He had financed a losing battle to save the boy, whose mother befriended Graham's family when Graham was a child.

During the day, Halterman was visited by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Halterman; his sister, Mrs. Cleo Johnson, Cheshire; his brother, Scott Halterman, Peoria, Illinois; two cousins; his sister-in-law; Mr. Graham, who was with him until his death, and a Mr. Davis, undertaker, of Omer & Davis of Beaver, with whom he made his funeral arrangements. His body was taken to Beaver, his father's home, where services will be held Sunday afternoon.

Leo Halterman was the first Fayette county man to be electrocuted and the second to be executed for murder.

Prunes Now Packed in Many Ways

THE story of the rise of the erstwhile humble prune to one of today's choicest fruits has for its climax that turning point in its career when it was first grown in the United States. Until as recently as 1890 almost the entire supply of prunes was imported from Europe. Today, we not only supply our own prune needs but those of Europe as well.

Today, when prunes are served as a delicacy, as well as a staple, and are a recognized health food, they can be bought in a variety of forms. Canned prunes are now available packed in juice or dry-packed, and there are also prunes in cardboard packages.

The canned product ranges from small "individual" size cans holding eight or nine prunes up to the gallon size.

The cans of dry packed prunes come in three sizes: one pound, one pound twelve ounces, and five pounds. These are not stewed prunes, but as the name implies, dried prunes packed in tins to retain the flavor. Slow, dry cooking under a special vacuum process makes them moist and tender.

Prunes canned in juice are perhaps the most delicious that can be obtained. They, too, are selected fruit, cooked to a degree which has made them tender but yet firm, and the rich juice adds greatly to their flavor.

The American prune, raised in California and the Pacific states, is a direct descendant of the famous French "prune d'agen" which a Frenchman planted in his fruit garden in the Santa Clara valley in 1856. The Santa Clara valley remains the greatest prune-producing district and the "prune d'agen" is still supreme—famous for its aromatic flavor, high sugar content, dense texture and small stone.

The nutritive value of prunes is well known. For generations people have eaten prunes for their healthful properties, even before the choicer prunes were obtainable. They contain a large content of easily digested sugar which supplies bodily energy very quickly. The roughage furnished by the skins and the tart juices act as a laxative.

Prune and Cottage Cheese Salad

is made by stoning contents of a can of dry-packed prunes. Cut them in halves; season cottage cheese and form in flat cakes. Place four halves of prunes on each and serve on lettuce leaves with French dressing.

With cold meats, Spiced Prunes are an appetizing addition. Bring one-half cup each of sugar and vinegar and one teaspoon each of cinnamon and cloves to the boiling point. Add a medium can of dry-packed prunes and boil gently for fifteen minutes.

Prune and Rice Loaf with Cheese Sauce will be found excellent. Boil half a cup of rice, drain and reserve the stock. Stone and chop one-pound can of dry-packed prunes and add to rice with one cup of chopped nuts, one egg well beaten, one and one-half teaspoons salt, and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Pour into a greased loaf pan and bake thirty minutes in moderate oven. For cheese sauce, add one-half cup of grated cheese to one cup of thin white sauce in which one cup of rice has been used for the liquid. After adding cheese, beat until it is melted and serve immediately.

LINDY PRAISES, BILLY RAPS

Washington, June 16.—(U.P.)—With former Colonel "Billy" Mitchell continuing his attacks on the Navy Department for alleged carelessness in dealing with his plane, "Spirit of St. Louis," Charles Lindbergh today, in a telegram to the Washington Post, complimented the personnel at the naval air station who handled his machine.

Lindbergh expressed his "sincere appreciation for the prompt and efficient manner in which they cared for my plane."

In the same issue, the Post printed a second communication from Mitchell in which he accused the navy of "propaganda," said the ill-fated Shenandoah was sent out in a storm without adequate maps, charged that Commander Rogers' flight to Hawaii was also inadequately arranged and added:

"The same incompetence has recently resulted in the navy killing 16 men in about 35 days around Norfolk."

WORLD'S HOTTEST AND COLDEST SPOTS

Siberia Holds Record With 90.4 Degrees Below.

Washington.—Days are coming when we shall enjoy just thinking of the coldest spot on earth. That imaginary comfort may be enhanced by a knowledge of the exact time and location of the coldest known temperature. Verkhoyansk, Siberia, just within the Arctic circle, experienced 90.4 degrees below zero Fahrenheit on January 15, 1885. It was unofficially reported that this same place recently broke the above record with 97.6 degrees below.

However, do not start for Verkhoyansk for your vacation, for the temperature rises to 80 degrees during the two-month summer. Miles City, Mont., holds the low record for the United States with 65 degrees below.

It may help the fellow who must enjoy the sea breeze of an electric fan to know of a hotter spot than his own chair. The Italian meteorological station of Azizia registered 136.4 degrees Fahrenheit in the shade on September 13, 1922. Azizia is in the semi-desert plain of Jefara, northern Africa. The mean annual temperature for this region is 70.8 degrees.

Before Azizia established her hottest day California's similar arid inland plain held the world's record with 134 degrees in the shade. This was at Greenland ranch on the edge of Death valley, where the thermometer goes higher than 120 degrees every summer. Officials at the weather bureau question Azizia's record because the conditions under which the 136.4 degrees were obtained were not certainly proper. However, this may be the American desire for bigger and better climate, as Prof. Filippo Eredia saw the establishment of the meteorological station at the Italian settlement in 1913 and took great pains to insure the accurate functioning of the instruments after approved methods.

Though summer out-of-doors recreation is tempting, the need for vacations is apparently greater in winter than in summer. Scientific investigation has discovered that it is a great mistake to speed up at the end of January while in May nature lends her aid and human energy is increased. We are still more energetic in October.

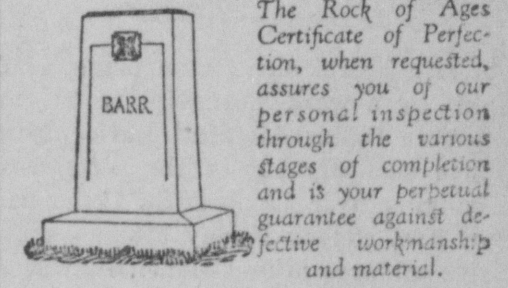

Nervous America might well change her habit and relax in winter vacations when the need for slowing up is greatest.

What Shall We Have For Dessert?

DESSERTS are not a burden if they are prepared well in advance. If they are made early in the day or even the day before, the housewife may go out shopping, or may take tea with a friend, without worrying about her dinner.

Some desserts are much better for having been made the day before, for instance this crème brouillé. It is made by bringing to a boil two cups of evaporated milk, taking it off the flame and stirring into it four eggs, three tablespoons sugar and a pinch of salt, all of which have been beaten thoroughly together. Place in double boiler and continue stirring five minutes. Pour into pudding dish to cool. Top with either brown sugar or drained canned fruit mixed with powdered sugar.

Arrangements for pineapple-marshmallow fruit cup must be made early in the morning. Cut into halves one pound of marshmallows and let soak all day in the juice of crushed pineapple. At dinner-time add the pineapple, put into sherbet glasses and top with whipped cream.

Chestnuts, served so often and variously on the "continent," are rather neglected in America, though they are delicious either in the stuffing of fowl or in desserts, and may be purchased in any sizable city at reasonable prices. This chestnut purée is extremely good and is unusual enough to have for a special company dessert. Soil two pounds of chestnuts, peel, man, add sugar, vanilla, and enough evaporated milk to bind the mixture together. Put on individual plates in mounds; garnish with whipped cream, slices of canned pear, and lady fingers.

Any kind of fruit sponge proves a popular dessert, the following, made with cherries, particularly so. Heat a can of cherries and strain off the juice. Soak one tablespoon gelatin in a little water and add to the hot juice. Chill. When it begins to harden, beat it and add the whites of two or three well-beaten eggs. Pour into a mold with alternate layers of cherries. Chill. Turn out and garnish with whipped cream to which sugar and vanilla have been added.

Cocoanut blanc mange is nice made in individual portions. Stir three tablespoons cornstarch in a little milk and cook in two cups of milk. Add one-half cup of sugar and three beaten eggs, then a cup of canned cocoanut, a pinch of salt and a tablespoon of vanilla. Pour into cups, cool, and set in the refrigerator. Use the remainder of the cocoanut as a garnish, along with little mounds of raspberry or apple jelly. The canned cocoanut is so moist and fresh that it is delicious in this blanc mange.

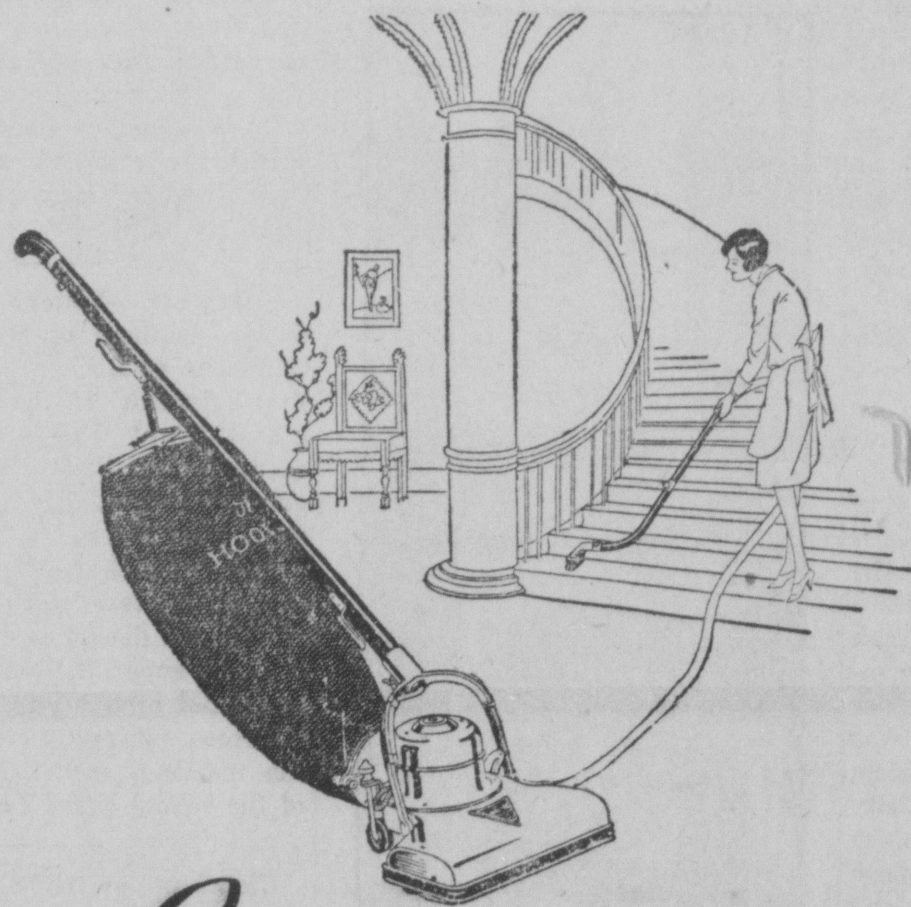

A very simple cold dessert that may be made before it is required, is blackberry mash. Bring a can of blackberries to a boil and sift in one-half cup sugar and one-quarter cup flour, stirring all the time. Pour into a mould, chill and serve with cream.

Any of the canned small fruits may be used thus.

Hot puddings are better used when the first part of the meal is very light or takes little work to prepare. Peach cake tastes good cold, but it is ambrosia itself when hot. Make it by adding extra butter and sugar to any good muffin batter. Spread on a shallow greased pan, and press into it thick slices of canned peaches, dusted with powdered sugar and cinnamon. Sprinkle with ground nut meats and bake in a moderate oven.

This steamed blueberry pudding may be cooked in advance and reheated when required: Sift together one and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking-powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one-quarter cup sugar. Add three tablespoons melted butter, beating it in thoroughly; then add two cups of canned blueberries from which the juice has been drained, and one-quarter cup milk. Serve with this a foamy sauce made by cooking together one cup brown sugar, two tablespoons water, and one tablespoon butter, then taking off the flame and beating into it a beaten egg.

Shop once a week and keep the supply shelf stocked with ingredients needed for these desserts, so that any one of them may be made at any time. There should always be some cans of mixed fruits for salads, white cherries, sour red cherries, moist cocoanut, dry shredded cocoanut peaches, apricots, blackberries and blueberries.

Spanish Mayor Learns

Women Can't Be Bossed

Almendralejo, Spain.—The mayor of this mountain town near the Portuguese frontier is determined to save his woman constituents from the taint of short skirts and bobbed hair despite their assertions that they don't wish to be saved.

But his honor, Senor Francisco Montero de la Barrera, has adopted new tactics. He has abandoned his proposal to fine women who appear on the streets in short hair or abbreviated skirts. Instead he will present this year prizes to the two most charming maidens of his city of 13,000 inhabitants who maintain the old-fashioned long hair and skirts.

British Doctor Explains

That Gum Chewing Habit

Birmingham, Eng.—"There's a reason" for chewing gum, it appears from an article written by Dr. W. J. Burns Selkirk, in the British Medical Journal. The doctor also suggests that gum can be offered as a substitute for cigarettes to excessive smokers, that it is useful in curing the "chocolate habit," and that it acts as a sedative for frayed nerves and insomnia.

ENGLAND'S STORY

REVEALED IN INNS

Faded Signs Tell Past of Many Villages.

Birmingham, England.—English villages in agricultural sections are often more than 1,000 years old, and bits of their history are often written in quaint signs which have survived for many centuries.

Next to the church, the inns and smithies are usually the oldest buildings in the villages which have not been engulfed by industries. Before the days of railways and motors the smithy was the center to which everyone had to go both in peace and in war.

Inn signs are particularly useful in tracing the history of villages, as they often show the seals or insignia of lords under whose protection the village thrived in past ages, and frequently indicate the past character of the neighborhood.

But the purely fanciful signs are even more interesting than those which have historical background. One sign, which used to be very common on old English inns, was the "Five Alls." The sign represents the king, "who governs all"; the bishop, "who prays for all"; the lawyer, "who pleads for all"; the soldier, "who fights for all"; and the laborer, "who works for all."

Although many individuals in direct line of descent link the present villagers with their ancestors before the Norman conquest, the villagers of today often know little about the history of their communities, and search of village records often yields little information about the early struggles of the tiny communities which are made up of low brown cottages screened by trees and vines.

Says He Has Found

Lost City of Ophir

London.—After a search lasting 20 years, a British naval officer, Commander C. Crauford, declares he has discovered the lost lands of Ophir, whence the queen of Sheba brought to Solomon her magnificent gift of 33 tons of incense, spices, gold, jewels, apes, peacocks, pearls and other valuables. Lecturing to the United Services Institute recently, Commander Crauford said he found the city of Ophir exactly where it ought to be—in Arabia, about 400 miles east of Aden.

The city, with its ruined temple of God, is now little more than ruins, which have been visited by many seamen and political agents, he said, but they have never identified it. The commander suggested that excavations on the site would be richly repaid, and said that the land, which was mineral wealth, should be developed.

"The city is ideally situated," he said. "It has a harbor to the north and has a river which gives wharf space for a seaport. But a thin ribbon of coral sand is drawn across the harbor mouth. It is this strip of sand that strangled the life of Ophir. There is great wealth in Ophir still."

"Palestine now is the Palestine of King Saul. It lies in our power to develop the land to the prosperity of Solomon. There are gold mines and precious stones in the ground, a veritable Transvaal there."

French Alchemist Again

Reports Making Gold

Paris.—France's modern alchemist, Jollivet Castelot of Douai, again is sure he is hot on the trail of the famed but unfound philosopher's stone with which the ancients believed base metals could be transmuted into gold.

This alchemist asserts his process of producing gold synthetically now is commercially profitable.

Out of six grams of silver, two of sulphur of antimony, one of orpiment and one of tin, he affirms, he has produced ten milligrams of gold.

He melts the metals, he says, heating them to 1,100 degrees Centigrade, and a complicated process ends in precipitating the gold.

The addition of tin, he says, has improved his earlier process. He claims that besides the gold, almost all the original quantity of silver is recoverable.

Briton Makes Bungalow of Air Liner Cabin

London.—Everyone knows that most English houses of any antiquity at all generally boast a small collection of spooks, but it is believed that no house on these islands is quite as "shady" as the summer home of Capt. G. H. Leverton, in Wallington, Surrey.

Through it roam the shades of 10,000 travelers who have flown over the city of London in the Vimy-Rolls Royce air liner of the Imperial Airways. After the big plane had outlived its usefulness flying from London to Paris, Captain Leverton bought it and turned the roomy cabin into a bungalow.

Hens to Lay Eggs

for Apes to Steal

Odessa.—A shipload of 14 chimpanzees has arrived from Africa and will be established on the Soviet government's "monkey farm" at Suchum, in the Caucasus. The commissary of health is opening the monkey colony to breed a supply of animals for transplanting monkey glands to rejuvenate people.

Professor Ivanoff of the Leningrad Institute of Medicine accompanied the chimpanzees. He returned from a year's study and experiment in central Africa, where he made scientific tests of cross-breeding monkeys with other animals.

The "monkey farm" is in tropical Russia and has been prepared to make the chimpanzees feel at home. Even a flock of hens has been provided, to lay eggs which the chimpanzees can steal and suck as they do in Africa.

DAGGER IS FOUND IN UR 5,000 YEARS OLD

Hilt Made of Lapis Lazuli With Studs of Gold.

London.—A wonderful five thousand-year-old golden dagger was one of the many treasures of Ur described by Prof. Leonard Woolley, head of the British Museum section of the Anglo-American expedition which has been excavating the neighborhood of the birthplace of the patriarch Abraham.
The flight of time is vividly depicted by Woolley in his latest report to the British museum when he emphasizes that many of the expedition's finds date from a period "more remote in time from Nebuchadnezzar than Nebuchadnezzar is from us, and 2,000 years or more older than the treasures of Tut-Ankh-Amen with which they challenge comparison."

The excavation work has just been closed for the "season," partly owing to lack of funds, but Woolley and his fellow-scientists strongly favor more extensive examination of the ruins for,
as he says, "The further we go back the more elaborate and the more finished seems to be the art of Sumeria."
At the end of the expedition's fifth season archeologists and historians are now able to picture in detail the civilization of Mesopotamia in 3500
B. C., and "what is truly surprising is the wealth and the high level of the culture of that remote time."

As regards the dagger referred to, Woolley declares the hilt is made of one piece of deep blue lapis lazuli decorated with studs of gold; the blade is of gold, sharp and bright; the sheath, also of gold, is plain at the back, but in front covered with an exquisite design in filigree. With this was found a golden reticule also decorated with filigree, containing a tiny toilet set, tweezers, stiletto and spoon, all in gold. They were at least five thousand five hundred years old.

Seals of Kings.

Excavating the ancient cemeteries during recent weeks the expedition found cylinder seals of no fewer than five early kings, of whom three were unknown to history. It was when the excavators got below the two thousand-year-old graves that they made the best discoveries, for below these they found three thousand two hundred-year-old relics and, still lower, graves going back to 3,500 years before Christ.

The earliest graves were the richest,
though naturally not all the treasures they once contained had survived the passage of time. There were no rock-cut chambers, hermetically sealed, such as preserved the woodwork and even the linen fabrics in Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb. In a land formed entirely of river silt, the ancients but dug a hole, laid at the bottom of it a square of matting, placed on this the body, draped likewise in a mat, with round it such offerings as they could afford, spread another mat over all and then filled up the pit again.

"Naturally after 5,500 years," says Woolley, "much has perished. Wood may have left a film of brown color in the soil, black tinter may represent the tasseled garments or the shroud of the dead, but that is all. Silver is generally reduced to powder, copper may survive, or may become green dust or splinters, the very bones of the man himself may have vanished;
only gold remains untouched by time."

But although much has gone a vast deal was yet found to throw light on the earliest period of Mesopotamian history. During the last month of the expedition's work not a day passed that did not produce at least one gold object; vessels of pottery and stone; copper tools and weapons, beads and amulets turned up daily in bewildering numbers and every now and then there was a special prize in the shape of some unique monument of art.

A Gaming Board.

One such remarkable treasure was a gaming board. The actual wooden board had long since decayed, but the incrustation which had covered it remained in position in the earth. It was a difficult and lengthy task to lift without disturbing them the hundreds of tiny bits of inlay that composed it, but this was done at last and now it needs only to be rebaked and clean the mosaic to possess again, just as it originally was, this royal "chess board."

The edging of the board is of mother-of-pearl, the border of mother-of-pearl, ivory and lapis lazuli. The squares, divided by strips of blue lapis and red paste, are of shell engraved and inlaid with red and blue in geometrical designs. Woolley says it is indeed a triumph of ancient craftsmanship.

Incomes in U. S. Increased Billion Dollars in 1926

New York.—Total income in the United States among its 110,000,000 inhabitants was $78,649,000,000 for 1926, compared to $77,313,000,000 for the preceding year, the National Industrial conference board reports.

If the value of all goods and services produced in the country last year had been evenly divided, every man, woman and child would have received $671.43, the report says.

Pays Tribute

Andorra.—This tiny Pyrenean republic of 5,200 inhabitants has just paid its annual tribute of 1,400 francs (about $50) to its two "co-princes," the President of France and the Roman Catholic bishop of Urgel, Spain.
For 649 years Andorra has paid tribute and enjoyed undisturbed sovereignty.

THE PICKAWAY DAUGHTERS OF THE REVOLUTION

Celebrate the One Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of Old Glory.

As June 14, was the 150th anniversary of the birth of our flag, Pickaway Plains Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, celebrated Flag day with a picnic at the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs.
Harry J. Dunlap, near Williamsport, as it was too cool to hold the picnic out-doors.

Thirty members and candidates were ushered to the dining room at noon, where a long table was loaded with all sorts of good things to eat, and each guest filled her plate as she marched around the table, thus carrying out the picnic idea. The hostess and her helpers served ice cream, strawberries and cake after the guests were seated in the living room.

At 2 o'clock the regent called the meeting to order and the Salute to the Flag was given, followed by all repeating the American's Creed. After the business session, Mrs. Charles Gerhardt spoke briefly of another and equally interesting anniversary to all Anglo-Saxons and one which all loyal Americans are asked to observe in addition to Flag Day, Magna Charta day, June 15. This day was selected because the great charter is the foundation of our civil and religious liberty. Hon. Elihu Root said that "it was the greatest of all events in the political development of modern liberty."

Mrs. Harp Van Riper read an intensely interesting article published in The Christian Herald, "The Making of our Flag." The regent read excerpts from the "National Republic" a patriotic magazine on National Defense. Mrs. George P. Hunsicker and Miss Marie Hamilton read historical jingles of the wonderful story of the United States, which started "In 1492, when Columbus sailed the ocean blue" up to the present time.
Mrs. Orion King read a poem, "Freedom's Banner."

Mrs. George P. Foresman announced that she had received no definite information about the grave of Ezekiah Van Durn, who settled near Circleville about 1797, and is buried nearby. She also asked for information concerning Anthony Hall's descendants, as she has located his grave and learned that he was a revolutionary soldier.

This was the last meeting until the new year starts in October and all agreed that the last was the best, in spite of the chilly weather.

Smart Dog

Lassie is a smart dog, indeed, and her mistress has taught her some very clever tricks. For instance, the Mrs.
will say: "Lassie, are you a Republican?" Thereupon Lassie will bark quite sharply, indicating that she is really of that political faith.

Late one night the Mr. and Mrs.
were awakened by Lassie's loud barking in the kitchen, and the Mrs. finally became uneasy.

"I believe there's some one in the house," she whispered.

"It's only Lassie holding a Republican caucus," grunted the Mr.
half-asleep.

New York Noisiest City

Owing to the tremendous amount of subway construction going on at the present time, New York is undoubtedly the noisiest city in the world. A rat-tat-tat of pneumatic riveters is heard all day long. This, combined with the thousands of other noises, taxes the nervous system enormously.
To lessen this wear and tear on the nerves, rubber ear plugs are now on sale in many of the drug stores.—Cap-

Agriculture has announced the development of a new process for making newsprint from hardwoods. It is believed the process will assist materially in continuing the newsprint supply from aspen and birch and possibly maple in the northeastern region and in developing of a newsprint industry in southern states for gumwood.

THEOPHILUS MERCER was noted for his practical jokes. The day before he died he said to his medical attendant: "Doctor, I have played many a joke in my time; and now I am going to play a last one. The joke is mainly on Harry, but it's on the public, too." Before the setting of another sun his joking and his days were ended forever. When they looked into his affairs the nature of his last joke was apparent.

Theophilus Mercer, the high liver,
the free spender, the man whose name was synonymous with wealth and prodigality, did not leave enough to pay his funeral expenses—if his creditors had all pressed their claims. His son, Harry, aged twenty-two, not long out of college, was astounded, bewildered. His father had always supplied him liberally with money and he had come to look upon the supply as inexhaustible.

Harry's mother had died when he was an infant, he had neither brother nor sister nor near relative; he was alone in the world with no money and no occupation.

The greatest wrench of all to him was the necessity he felt for postponing indefinitely his marriage with Mary Southland—perhaps breaking off their engagement altogether. He went to Mary and told her the whole story.

Ten dollars in his pocket was every-cent he had in the world; Mary had been reared in luxury. To take her from that luxury to a life of utter destitution—he loved her too well for that. Until he could support a wife in some degree of comfort he ought not to take one.

He did not dare trust himself to see
Mary again, but wrote her a letter, asking her to wait for him. Then he shipped aboard a tanker bound for San Diego by way of the canal.

As they say in the "movies," "an interval of eight years is supposed to have elapsed." Harry Mercer was home again. A paragraph in the papers announced the fact and the news soon spread that he had returned financially rehabilitated. At any rate, he represented a great corporation which was exploiting copper mines in Alaska and was "on the map" once more.

Harry sat in his room at his hotel gazing at an invitation on the table before him. Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Hemingway requested the pleasure of his company at dinner on Wednesday night. This was Monday. Could he bear meeting Mary Southland again as the wife of another? Yes; why not?
His love for her was still a part of his very being but had been mellowed by time. The dream of his youth was in "that deep, deep gulf where things that might have been and never were are always wandering." She had written him at San Diego promising to wait—for years if necessary. At San Diego he had left the ship and begun a series of wanderings in Central America and finally in Alaska. Sometimes mail reached him in the far,
wild regions to which he penetrated;
more often it did not.

He had warned Mary of this and was not surprised when, occasionally, he received a letter from her and it contained references to previous letters which he had never received.
Every now and then, from out-of-the-way places, he sent off letters to her, some of which got through and some of which did not.

Harry was in Alaska and had come down to Sitka from a long trip up somewhere near the Arctic circle when he met a man from his home city whom he had known slightly in former days. He was thirsty for news from home. "By the way," said the garrulous purveyor of it, "old Southland's daughter—the pretty one—what was her name?"

"Mary," suggested Harry.

"Mary, was it? Yes, I guess that was the name; but no matter"—went on the gossip—"she was married to Gus Hemingway—mighty rich fellow
—just before I left home."

Harry never wrote to Mary after that. He started the next day for the Aleutian Islands and was lost to civilization for a year. Finally came his connection with the copper company, his fortunes mended. He could look to the future confidently as far as money was concerned.

Eight years and he was back in his home town, gazing thoughtfully at a dinner invitation. He wondered how Mary looked now. Had she changed?
She must be twenty-nine years old now; but he felt that she would always look to him as she did when he saw her last. How the years had gone by! Why, that lanky young sister of Mary's, all eyes and elbows—she must be a young lady by now.

When Mercer entered the Hemingway drawing room on Wednesday night, one of the most beautiful women he had ever seen came sweeping toward him with her hands held out.

"Oh, Harry!" she cried; "confess,
now, you never want to have recognized me in the world. Don't you remember Mary's homely little sister, Agatha?
'Aggie' you used to call me. Come here little I introduce you to my husband. Mary will be down in a minute. When she heard you were home again she was all a-tremble.
She's an old maid—been waiting for you all these years. You have got a lot of explaining to do. Just think, I was sixteen when you went away and I'm twenty-four now. Mary is nearly thirty. Here she comes, now."

FOLKSBURG ITEMS

The writer was obliged to put in

she didn't see how he could have got act like they think everything is in

And he said if they could calm down and reflect on nature a little, why maybe it would help them understand that they don't have to take all the

NATIONAL PROMENADE BAND WILL GO TO PARIS, FRANCE, CONVENTION

One of the finest musical organizations in the United States, the National Promenade band of Greenville, Ohio, will go abroad to attend the ninth annual convention of The American Legion to be held in Paris September 19 to 23, J. J. Saslavsky, 335 South High street, Columbus, department France convention officer, has informed Howard P. Savage, national commander of the legion. Movement of this splendid band, which took first prize at both the St. Paul and Philadelphia national conventions of the Legion, was made possible by the Eighty-seventh General Assembly of Ohio in appropriating $12,000, approximately $300 each for the Ohio musicians to defray expenses. The National Promenade band, of the "40 and 8," play and honor society of the Legion made up of men of the Erk Cottrell Post No. 140, has provided the official music for the national promenades at the New Orleans, St. Paul, Omaha and Philadelphia conventions of the national organization. Leonard Wolfe is chef de musique, A. F. Sarver, bureau de directeur and Robert I. Altie, ministre des finances, of the band. The Greenville band will shove-off for Paris September 8, on the SS. Leviathan, official flagship of the legion fleet of vessels. The bandsmen will return on the SS. Republic on October 1. A number of bands and drill teams will attend the Paris convention. The Iowa legislature recently appropriated $50,000 to take the Fort Dodge drum and bugle corps the Manahan Post band and the Davenport Auxiliary girls drill team abroad. The New York legislature appropriated $10,000 to send the state championship Oneida bugle band to Paris. California and Florida have likewise made preparations to take musical organizations overseas.

Variety of Meanings Traceable to "Stuff"

The word stuff is probably from the Latin "stuppa," meaning tow or okum. Used as a noun, stuff has a variety of meanings, all more or less related. For example, it means the material which is to be worked up in any process of manufacture. It also means especially woven material, cloth not made into garments, fabric; or the meaning is restricted to textile made entirely of worsted. Another meaning is refuse or worthless matter, or unorganized language, nonsense. The word has a special meaning in nautical affairs. Here stuff is the name given to a melted mass of turpentine and tallow with which are smeared the masts, sides, and bottom of a ship.

AMUSEMENTS

Attesting to the tremendous popularity of Adolphe Menjou was the enthusiastic audience that greeted the initial showing of his latest Paramount starring vehicle "Evening Clothes" at the Mct theater last night. Menjou again cast as a continental, draws from a well stocked repertoire to run thru all the human emotions in reels of sheer entertainment.

In the opening scenes in the French countryside, he treats to a perfect characterization of the gentleman French farmer, a role that is different from anything he has even done before. But as Lucien D'Artois of the landed gentry, he is as convincing as he has always been as a 'Gentleman of Paris.'

The story concerns itself first of all with the failure of Lucien to please Germaine (Virginia Valli) his bride. She has been brought up in the social circles of Paris, and is unable to understand his countryfied ways. She marries him not thru love, but in deference to the wishes of her parents. When she leaves Menjou on the day of their wedding, he determines to remake himself in order to win her affection.

The scene of the story shifts to Paris, where Menjou is moulding himself into a boulevardier. Here he assumes the polished sophistication that made him famous. His failure to win back his wife leads him to a life of frivolity and he soon dissipates his fortune. Menjou poverty-stricken is a humorous as well as a noble character. The crowning touch is when nothing is left of his former affluence except a dress suit which incidentally is the only suit he has. His attempts at nonchalance while walking in evening clothes down the street in broad daylight, give rise to many humorous situations.

Germaine's final recapitulation comes only after an intensely dramatic episode.

Luther Reed, who directed Menjou in his recent hit, "The Ace of Cads," directed "Evening Clothes." In support are Noah Beery, Louise Brooks and Lido Manetti.

DR. LOOMIS IS FREED IN SLAY-ING OF WIFE

Physician and Surgeon Is Acquitted After Jury Deliberates 32 Minutes.

Detroit, June 16.—After deliberating 32 minutes, a recorder's court jury today acquitted Dr. Frank R. Loomis, a physician and surgeon, charged with slaying his wife, Grace Burns Loomis, the night of last Feb. 22.

Mrs. Loomis' body was found on the sun room floor of the Loomis home. She had been clubbed to death. Finding of the body was reported to police by Dr. Loomis, who said he made the discovery after he returned from a 45-minute walk in the neighborhood.

He assigned robbery as a possible motive, saying he had given Mrs. Loomis $100 for the purchase of some clothing before he left the house. The money was not found.

The prosecution contended that the physician was in the house at the time his wife is thought to have been slain, and produced witnesses who testified they heard moans from the family home before 9 o'clock, the hour Dr. Loomis said he left for the walk.

Hungarian Fencer Was in 10,000 Duels

Budapest. — Ten thousand duels, fought, arranged or attended, was the record that enabled Karl Fodor, fencing master, to die happy.

Fodor died recently after a celebration in honor of his ten thousandth duel, which was in his fencing rooms.

For forty years Budapest duels were held, as a rule, in his quarters. He presided over the many political sword quarrels of Count Tisza. He saw behind the scenes of most of the political differences and society scandals of his time.

His most famous affair was the duel of Count Etienne Keglevitch and Deputy Karl Hencz. It was to be a deadly fight, but it ended before it started. The count, very near-sighted, ran against his adversary's sword before the signal for the start and was killed.

The Compose and Jacket Suit for Spring Is a Distinct Feature of the Season's Fashions

GWEN LEE

WITH the advent of warmer weather, the compose suit becomes increasingly important. Trim tailors with dark jackets and skirts of contrasting materials, noticeably gray, are the vogue of the moment for general daytime wear, if one looks well in the severe cut of a masculine tailor.

More feminine in appeal are the jacket ensembles worn with frocks of contrasting colors and fabrics.

These may be developed in the fashionable black and white vogue in satin or of entirely different combinations in materials and colors.

One of the smartest of these suits is the ensemble worn by Gwen Lee in "Heaven on Earth," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. The one piece frock is of natural kasha with an accompanying jacket of black velvet lined with the kasha and scalloped in front. A black felt hat is worn with this costume.

Venus Favors Fruit

DARK purple grapes glistening with Olympian dew, cherries the flaming red of setting suns, pears bronzed by warm scented zephyrs, and in the center a pineapple—food of earthly kings, golden, majestic.

These, in a gorgeous basket, Hebe, cup-bearer of the Olympian gods, offered to Venus. Smiling, Venus surveyed the rare fruits, marveled at their rainbow colorings and reaching out with her fair arm, she chose the golden pineapple, Monarch of Fruits.

Whether we revel in mythological lore, or delight in tales of beautiful women—beauty holds us enthralled.

And out of the heart of fine-fruits, springs beauty.

Fruit, about 80 per cent water, cleanses the body and brings glowing color to the skin. Its mineral wealth produces bone strength, the crude fiber aids digestion and gives to beautiful teeth the resistance they need; the fruit sugars stimulate and nourish without fattening; an abundance of vitamins builds up the tissues.

The pineapple which Venus chose, has further charms. Cultivated now in Hawaii, the land of sunshine, it has absorbed sunny flavor and rich nutriment. Bromelain, secreted in its juices, soothes the throat and aids digestion. And so that all parts of the world may have the royal Hawaiian pineapple ripe and therefore at its best, it is packed in cans in Hawaii immediately as it leaves the fields, where it has stored away health and beauty-giving riches.

Thus today, the modern Venus may have her choice fruits at all seasons—and Hebes of many lands bear for her treasures which rival rare fruits of Olympia.

Shiftless Folk

A small negro boy, aged six, in Goochland county, Virginia, accompanied his father to Richmond recently, his first visit to the city. "How did you like it in town?" some one asked him, on his return. "It's all right," replied the little darkey, "but jes' walkin' aroun'—Ah doan' see how dey makes a livin'."

Lengthy Humans

There have been reports among the less civilized tribes and among certain savage peoples that men have measured as much as 15 feet. From actual records that have been compiled, the greatest height found was that of Topinard's Finlander, who measured 112 inches.

30,000 School Children

Die on Roads in 5 Years

Washington. — Thirty thousand school children, most of them less than thirteen, were killed on the highways during the five-year period ending January 1, 1927, the American Road Builders' association stated recently. A survey of accident conditions over this period revealed that more than 3,000,000 persons had been sent to hospitals as a result of street and highway accidents, in addition to the loss of more than 100,000 lives.

BLEAK PACIFIC ISLE MAY SOLVE ORIGIN OF INDIANS

Primitive People on Nunivak May Be Connecting Link With Ancient Mongolians.

Anchorage, Alaska.—Far out in Bering sea lies Nunivak Island. On this bleak bit of land, 70 miles long by perhaps 50 wide, lives a tribe or tribes of people who may be the link connecting the American Indians with the people of ancient Mongolia.

Washed on all sides by treacherous shoals and beaten continually by roaring, pitching surf, ships have always given Nunivak Island a wide berth. Only once a year the government cutters or the Boxer of the United States bureau of education dare send a boat ashore.

The landing parties always came back with tales of the most primitive peoples in Alaska. The natives are divergent from the mainland tribes and retain many of the ancient customs of the original native.

If they came directly from Siberia or Mongolia there will be something on the island to connect them with the Asiatic land. Noted scientists, Henry B. Collier and T. Dale Stewart, both of Washington, D. C., are aboard the Boxer en route to Nunivak. They will try to discover how long man has inhabited the island. To do this they intend to dig deep into the old soil, turn out the sepulchers, and unearth utensils, weapons, and relics to add to museum collections.

The scientists will make measurements of the native physique, records of their language and observations of tribal customs and art. The Nunivak tribes have lived on the island for hundreds of years, with comparatively little contact with white man's civilization. It is expected they will possess furs, curios, ivory, and perhaps gold to barter for trade goods.

With music and magic tricks the scientists hope to win their confidence and procure aid in the search from now until late September of ethnological data. A study of the fauna and flora of the island will be made by the scientists.

WORKERS NOW FIND TIME FOR LEISURE

The five-day week has been a bug-bear to many an employer, but think how near we have come to it already. A hundred years ago the workman labored for 12 hours a day for six days a week, and in return got shelter, food and clothing and not much of any of them. Now, in many industries, the 44-hour week is common, so that the step to 40 hours is short.

And the employers' habits have changed. The afternoon off for golf, the winter vacation in addition to one in the summer, the week-end that begins on Friday afternoon—how many are shocked by these?

The sage Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York American league baseball team, thinks his possession worth $3,000,000, due to the added leisure of Americans. And golf, he says, has added to the attendance at baseball parks. Interest in one has aroused interest in the other.—Nation's Business.

Use Soap and Water Now as Disinfectant

Disinfectants like carbolic are rapidly being replaced by the constant application of plain soap and water to persons, rooms, and appliances. Soap and water do their work by the simple method of removing all dirt—the material in which germs thrive—and, in fact, when they work in co-operation they are perfect disinfectants.

Some authorities, said a doctor recently, have more or less abandoned the usual disinfection after the recovery of the patient, and have substituted the constant use of soap and water for the household, and for infected clothing.

Great destruction is worked among germs, particularly the typhoid bacilli, by soap that contains coconut oil, while scientific investigations into the effect of hot water and common soap on certain types of germs have demonstrated its efficiency as a germicide.

OSTEOPATHIC CONVENTION

Dr. W. H. Wilderson, 118 North Scioto street, has received an invitation to attend a unique convention of his osteopathic college class on Pike's Peak on July 30.

This reunion is to be one of the social features in connection with the International osteopathic convention which will meet in Denver the last week of July.

Many osteopathic college classes are arranging reunions at one or another of the countless spots of beauty within reasonable distance of Denver.

The doctors who have been advising all their patients to undergo thorough health examinations will have a chance to set a good example at this convention. A group of diagnostic experts will be in attendance to examine the doctors themselves very thoroughly, along the lines of general physical condition, heart, lungs, digestive tract, nerves, eye, ear, nose and throat, X-ray, blood, excretions, secretions and everything else it takes to round out the thorough structural examination of the body machine which is the basic part of all osteopathic diagnosis.

Dr. Wilderson is a graduate of the American School of Osteopathy in 1899.

BETTER SERVICE AND MORE TIRE MILEAGE

Changing From One Wheel To Another Distributes Wear More Evenly.

Changing tires around from time to time will result in longer tire life and better all 'round service, according to George E. Hammel of this city agent for Firestone dealers in Circleville.

"When a motorist buys a new spare, we recommend that he put it on the right rear and give that tire a rest for a while," he stated. "The other tires should be changed, too, left front to left rear, etc. Each wheel puts certain strains on a tire different from that of the other wheels and by using the tire on each in turn the wear is evenly distributed and the tire lasts longer and gives better service.

"It is also important to have tires looked over frequently for minor cuts and bruises, etc, and to have small repairs made promptly. Tires should be inflated to the correct pressure as under-inflation of a few pounds will often result in the loss of hundreds of miles of useful service. Valve caps, screwed down tightly by hand, should always be used to prevent air leaks.

"If motorists will give their tires ordinary care and attention their will have less trouble and enjoy greater tire satisfaction."

SILVERY PLANE ALIGHTS GRACEFULLY

BEARING THE FAMOUS FLIER LINDBERGH TO ST. LOUIS HOME

Haze Fills Sky Above River Metropolis—"Same Slim" Old Pals Declare Gleeefully But He Looks Tired, Is After Thought—Given Tumultuous Welcome—Throngs Atop All Buildings Shout.

A graceful silver monoplane, trailed by a work worn biplane of the United States Air Mail service, hummed suddenly out of the deep haze hanging over Lambert-St. Louis field at 3:32 o'clock Friday afternoon and five minutes later Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was home.

Of all the planes up to meet the world-acclaimed hero, only that piloted by a buddy of the air mail service from which the young history maker is on leave, was able to find him in the murky 15 miles between the flying field and St. Louis.

It was flown by Philip R. (Red) Love and carried an Associated Press correspondent as a passenger.

Hundreds of thousands of St. Louisans, grouped on roofs, river banks and in open spaces had cheered "Lucky Slim" to an echo, perhaps inaudible to him, as for 20 minutes he maneuvered his "Spirit of St. Louis" over the downtown and residential district, cavorting in sweeps and swirls of sheer joy at being again over his own hometown.

But it remained for Love to be the first to greet the intrepid king of the air and guide him to Lambert-St. Louis field, where 5,000 drain drenched men and women, including the world-famed young flier's mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lodge Lindbergh, and Dwight F. Davis, of St. Louis, secretary of war, waited to greet him. The crowd which might well have numbered 200,000, was held to the comparatively handful by strict injunction of the arrangements committee to keep away from the flying field.

St. Louis' public acclaim for the youth who has spread its fame before the eyes of the world for more than a month since he hopped from San Diego and thence to New York for his epochal solo flight to Paris was saved for Saturday and Sunday, when all the honors that a grateful city and state can bestow will be heaped upon those which already have been showered upon him at home and abroad.

Friday night "Slim"—that's his St. Louis name, "Lindy" being awarded far afield—rested in the home of one of the men who with a half dozen others "chipped in with him" to finance the transatlantic flight.

There was nothing on his program except a few hours with his mother, an informal dinner and rest against the two strenuous days immediately ahead.

Colonel Lindbergh left New York for his trip home at 6:17 o'clock St. Louis time Friday morning and, as if reluctant to come down, prolonged his flight until he had been in the air nine hours and 20 minutes, as against seven hours and 15 minutes for his hop east May 12.

St. Louis received back pretty much the same old "Slim" it sent away a few weeks ago to conquer space and distance in an achievement which will ring thru the ages. He still was rather diffident, apparently somewhat confused by the honors accorded to him, considerate of the interests of others and smiling vigorously with the lightness of his load of 25 years, but to those who knew him best—the air mail fliers and the mechanics of Lambert-St. Louis field, there was a slight, subtle change.

Hurting out of the clouds, which restricted vision to the very edge of the 200 acre flying field, Colonel Lin-

bergh was upon his welcomers before they realized it was he. He had dropped his convoy of 32 planes at Scott field, Belleville, Illinois, 25 miles from St. Louis and was winging it home in lonely majesty until Love picked him up.

The crowd had expected to see the ace of the air swoop down attended by the ships which had accompanied him from Wilbur Wright field, Dayton, Ohio, in the world's greatest long-distance air parade.

The 5,000 at the field sent up a wild shout when it was realized "Slim" was home, mingling with it the roaring of automobile and airship exhausts and the honking of automobile horns. What they lacked in numbers they apparently sought to make up for in enthusiasm.

Then there went up a relieved cheer. Another rent the air when Lindbergh opened the door of his plane and slowly crawled out, apparently as fresh as a daisy excepting for a smudge of grease along one cheek. There was a continuation of cheering at his every movement—while he performed the double function of unlimbering and walking up and down for photographs, while he shook hands with some of his backers in the flight, while he was being greeted by his mother and while he walked to the automobile in which he was whisked away from the field within 10 minutes after he landed.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires
By Correspondents of the
United States Press
Association.

Gallipolis — J. E. Carpenter lockmaster, at government dam No. 25, in Ohio river at Addison near here has been appointed overseer of all locks and dams between Wheeling and Huntington. Carpenter stated today that river transportation will soon surpass all railroad combines in Ohio Valley. Thousands of tons of freight in barges and on packets are transported every month on the upper Ohio river and more boats of steel are to be built.

Cleveland — Victory perched today on the banners of Superintendent C. C. Pierce of Rocky river after the first skirmish in the village's high school "war." In a meeting surcharged with threats and heated arguments several hundred village residents gave Pierce a vote of confidence. Following the session, which had been called to sift criticism of Pierce for alleged discipline of a high school boy, the superintendent announced he would not offer his resignation.

Forces opposed to Pierce were in the meeting, including all members of the school board except one.

Cleveland — Altho the state has room for 750 insane and feeble-minded patients at homes in Columbus and Orient, "Red Tape" prevents transfer of an overflow of nearly 500 from Cleveland State hospital for the insane, members of the Cleveland Mental Hygiene committee were told late today. Dr. Guy H. Williams, superintendent of the hospital, city welfare director, Dudley S. Blossom, Dr. Alan R. Finlayson of Lakeside hospital and other speakers scored the city's lack of facilities for the proper case of the insane.

Dayton — Dr. Harry H. McClelland, for the past four years superintendent of the Dayton State hospital, tendered his resignation to John E. Harper, director state public welfare department. The resignation, effective July 1, was accepted. Dr. McClelland resigned to accept the newly created position of managing director of Ohio association for the welfare of the mentally sick.

Mrs. Obert Kuhn, who resides near Leisville, fell in the yard of her home Thursday and sustained a fracture of her left arm at the wrist. Dr. Henneger reduced the fracture and brought his patient to this city Saturday and took an X-Ray of the broken member at Dr. Courtwright's office.

CONGRESSMAN COOPER NAMED FOR GOVERNOR

Political Pot Begins to Boil
and Candidates are Coming in the Open.

Word, which reaches Columbus from Washington, places National Representative John G. Cooper, of Youngstown, congressman from the 19th Ohio district, much in the light as the Republican nominee for governor next year.

Those who have just returned from the National Capital say his name is being seriously discussed by the party leaders there and the belief is strong among many that he would be the most available man to select, even stronger than Congressman James J. Begg of Sandusky, representing the 13th district.

The argument being used in behalf of Cooper is his pronounced support of all dry measures and his consistent advocacy of woman's suffrage. This it is believed, would give him the unqualified endorsement of the Anti-Saloon league and all dry supporters and the enthusiastic vote of the Republican women and the followers of woman's suffrage. It is declared he could enter the campaign with these elements at his command more than any other man.

This announcement from Washington was received in Columbus with gratification among those who have been urging the name of the Youngstown congressman ever since the defeat of Myers Y. Cooper, of Cincinnati, Republican gubernatorial nominee, in the election of last year.

A movement in Cooper's behalf was started immediately following this and has steadily increased in strength since. This is especially true among women and several who are prominent in political and club work have openly advocated him and urged his candidacy as holding out the best promise of success at the polls. These women are now devoting themselves more assiduously than before to pushing his name forward and several Cooper clubs are to be organized within a short time.

It is possible he will be brought to Columbus by some women's organizations to deliver addresses with the belief that the better acquainted he becomes with the members of these the more enthusiastic his support will be.

Soot From Smudge Pots Colors Grave Monuments

Toppenish, Wash.—Sextons are busy with sponge and chamols cleaning grave monuments after the sootfall from the smudge pots burned in central Washington to fight off frost. Polished granite has an affinity for heavy soot and most of the tombstones in cemeteries resembled charred tree trunks in fire-swept forests. The heavy smoke and soot did much temporary damage, but through it all the fruit and prosperity were both saved to the apple growers.

Honey Burden Weighs Down Roof of House

Gomshall, England.—There's so much honey in the roof of a Fifteenth-century farmhouse here, called "Cole Kitchen farm," that the ceiling of the room immediately underneath is giving way beneath the weight after 100 years' service as a gigantic beehive.

T. H. English, the owner, says nobody ever tried to get the honey because it would necessitate removing the roof.

In the swarming season the place is smothered with bees.

LILLIPUTIAN MURDERER IS ELECTROCUTED

Leo Halterman Diminutive
Slayer Was Put to Death
Friday Night.

Mumbling an incoherent prayer and with a half smile fitting across his face, Leo Halterman, 27, the shortest man ever electrocuted in Ohio penitentiary, met death in the electric chair Friday night.

Before he died for the murder of his half brother and the latter's wife at South Solon, December 23, he delivered a rather lengthy speech, in a voice unshaken by emotional fear, in which he professed his belief in Jesus Christ.

Halterman, who was four feet, eight inches tall, entered the death chamber with Captain T. O. Reed, about 8:50 p. m.

Good-bye chaplain," he said to Chaplain Reed, "Pray for my children."

An extra strap was necessary to hold Halterman's legs firm, just above the knees. An extra pair of blocks had been placed just below the seat of the chair to brace his legs below the knees. His feet cleared the floor by eight inches.

He was pronounced dead at 8:57.

In the southwest corner of the death house was Art Graham, Columbus real estate dealer and lifelong friend of Halterman's family. He had financed a losing battle to save the boy, whose mother befriended Graham's family when Graham was a child.

During the day, Halterman was visited by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Halterman; his sister, Mrs. Cleo Johnson, Cheshire; his brother, Scott Halterman, Peoria, Illinois; two cousins; his sister-in-law; Mr. Graham, who was with him until his death, and a Mr. Davis, undertaker, of Omer & Davis of Beaver, with whom he made his funeral arrangements. His body was taken to Beaver, his father's home, where services will be held Sunday afternoon.

Leo Halterman was the first Fayette county man to be electrocuted and the second to be executed for murder.

Prunes Now Packed in Many Ways

THE story of the rise of the erstwhile humble prune to one of today's choicest fruits has for its climax that turning point in its career when it was first grown in the United States. Until as recently as 1890 almost the entire supply of prunes was imported from Europe. Today, we not only supply our own prune needs but those of Europe as well.

Today, when prunes are served as a delicacy, as well as a staple, and are a recognized health food, they can be bought in a variety of forms. Canned prunes are now available packed in juice or dry-packed, and there are also prunes in cardboard packages.

The canned product ranges from small "individual" size cans holding eight or nine prunes up to the gallon size.

The cans of dry packed prunes come in three sizes: one pound, one pound twelve ounces, and five pounds. These are not stewed prunes, but as the name implies, dried prunes packed in tins to retain the flavor. Slow, dry cooking under a special vacuum process makes them moist and tender.

Prunes canned in juice are perhaps the most delicious that can be obtained. They, too, are selected fruit, cooked to a degree which has made them tender but yet firm, and the rich juice adds greatly to their flavor.

The American prune, raised in California and the Pacific states, is a direct descendant of the famous French "prune d'agen" which a Frenchman planted in his fruit garden in the Santa Clara valley in 1856. The Santa Clara valley remains the greatest prune-producing district and the "prune d'agen" is still supreme—famous for its aromatic flavor, high sugar content, dense texture and small stone.

The nutritive value of prunes is well known. For generations people have eaten prunes for their healthful properties, even before the choicer prunes were obtainable. They contain a large content of easily digested sugar which supplies bodily energy very quickly. The roughage furnished by the skins and the tart juices act as a laxative.

is made by stoning contents of a can of dry-packed prunes. Cut them in halves; season cottage cheese and form in flat cakes. Place four halves of prunes on each and serve on lettuce leaves with French dressing.

With cold meats, Spiced Prunes are an appetizing addition. Bring one-half cup each of sugar and vinegar and one teaspoon each of cinnamon and cloves to the boiling point. Add a medium can of dry-packed prunes and boil gently for fifteen minutes.

Prune and Rice Loaf with Cheese Sauce will be found excellent. Boil half a cup of rice, drain and reserve the stock. Stone and chop one-pound can of dry-packed prunes and add to rice with one cup of chopped nuts, one egg well beaten, one and one-half teaspoons salt, and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Pour into a greased loaf pan and bake thirty minutes in moderate oven. For cheese sauce, add one-half cup of grated cheese to one cup of thin white sauce in which one cup of rice has been used for the liquid. After adding cheese, beat until it is melted and serve immediately.

LINDY PRAISES, BILLY RAPS

Washington, June 16.—(UP.)—With former Colonel "Billy" Mitchell continuing his attacks on the Navy Department for alleged carelessness in dealing with his plane, "Spirit of St. Louis," Charles Lindbergh today, in a telegram to the Washington Post, complimented the personnel at the naval air station who handled his machine.

Lindbergh expressed his "sincere appreciation for the prompt and efficient manner in which they cared for my plane."

In the same issue, the Post printed a second communication from Mitchell in which he accused the navy of "propaganda," said the ill-fated Shenandoah was sent out in a storm without adequate maps, charged that Commander Rogers' flight to Hawaii was also inadequately arranged and added:

"The same incompetence has recently resulted in the navy killing 16 men in about 35 days around Norfolk."

Little Mary was taken to the country and, of course, they showed her the barn and all the interesting things it contained—little pigs, a tiny calf and old black Tabby with her three little kittens busily getting their breakfast. Mary was enraptured and turning to her mother, exclaimed, "Do you suppose we could get a set like this for our house?"—Los Angeles Times.

Siberia Holds Record With 90.4 Degrees Below.

Washington.—Days are coming when we shall enjoy just thinking of the coldest spot on earth. That imaginary comfort may be enhanced by a knowledge of the exact time and location of the coldest known temperature. Verkhoyansk, Siberia, just within the Arctic circle, experienced 90.4 degrees below zero Fahrenheit on January 15, 1885. It was unofficially reported that this same place recently broke the above record with 97.6 degrees below.

However, do not start for Verkhoyansk for your vacation, for the temperature rises to 80 degrees during the two-month summer. Miles City, Mont., holds the low record for the United States with 65 degrees below.

It may help the fellow who must enjoy the sea breeze of an electric fan to know of a hotter spot than his own chair. The Italian meteorological station of Azizia registered 136.4 degrees Fahrenheit in the shade on September 13, 1922. Azizia is in the semi-desert plain of Jefara, northern Africa. The mean annual temperature for this region is 70.8 degrees.

Before Azizia established her hottest day California's similar arid inland plain held the world's record with 134 degrees in the shade. This was at Greenland ranch on the edge of Death valley, where the thermometer goes higher than 120 degrees every summer. Officials at the weather bureau question Azizia's record because the conditions under which the 136.4 degrees were obtained were not certainly proper. However, this may be the American desire for bigger and better climate, as Prof. Filippo Eredia saw the establishment of the meteorological station at the Italian settlement in 1913 and took great pains to insure the accurate functioning of the instruments after approved methods.

Though summer out-of-doors recreation is tempting, the need for vacations is apparently greater in winter than in summer. Scientific investigation has discovered that it is a great mistake to speed up at the end of January while in May nature lends her aid and human energy is increased. We are still more energetic in October.

Nervous America might well change her habit and relax in winter vacations when the need for slowing up is greatest.

Momentous Day in History

What Shall We Have For Dessert?

DESSERTS are not a burden if they are prepared well in advance. If they are made early in the day or even the day before, the housewife may go out shopping, or may take tea with a friend, without worrying about her dinner.

Some desserts are much better for having been made the day before, for instance this crème brûlée. It is made by bringing to a boil two cups of evaporated milk, taking it off the flame and stirring into it four eggs, three tablespoons sugar and a pinch of salt, all of which have been beaten thoroughly together. Place in double boiler and continue stirring five minutes. Pour into pudding dish to cool. Top with either brown sugar or drained canned fruit mixed with powdered sugar.

Arrangements for pineapple-marshmallow fruit cup must be made early in the morning. Cut into halves one pound of marshmallows and let soak all day in the juice of crushed pineapple. At dinner-time add the pineapple, put into sherbet glasses and top with whipped cream.

Chestnuts, served so often and variously on the "continent" are rather neglected in America, though they are delicious either in the stuffing of fowl or in desserts, and may be purchased in any sizable city at reasonable prices. This chestnut purée is extremely good and is unusual enough to have for a special company dessert. Boil two pounds of chestnuts, peel, masn, add sugar, vanilla, and enough evaporated milk to bind the mixture together. Put on individual plates in mounds; garnish with whipped cream, slices of canned pear, and lady fingers.

Any kind of fruit sponge proves a popular dessert, the following, made with cherries, particularly so. Heat a can of cherries and strain off the juice. Soak one tablespoon gelatin in a little water and add to the hot juice. Chill. When it begins to harden, beat it and add the whites of two or three well-beaten eggs. Pour into a mold with alternate layers of cherries. Chill. Turn out and garnish with whipped cream to which sugar and vanilla have been added.

Cocoanut blanc mange is nice made in individual portions. Stir three tablespoons cornstarch in a little milk and cook in two cups of milk. Add one-half cup of sugar and three beaten eggs, then a cup of canned cocoanut, a pinch of salt and a tablespoon of vanilla. Pour into cups, cool, and set in the refrigerator. Use the remainder of the cocoanut as a garnish, along with little mounds of raspberry or apple jelly. The canned cocoanut is so moist and fresh that it is delicious in this blanc mange.

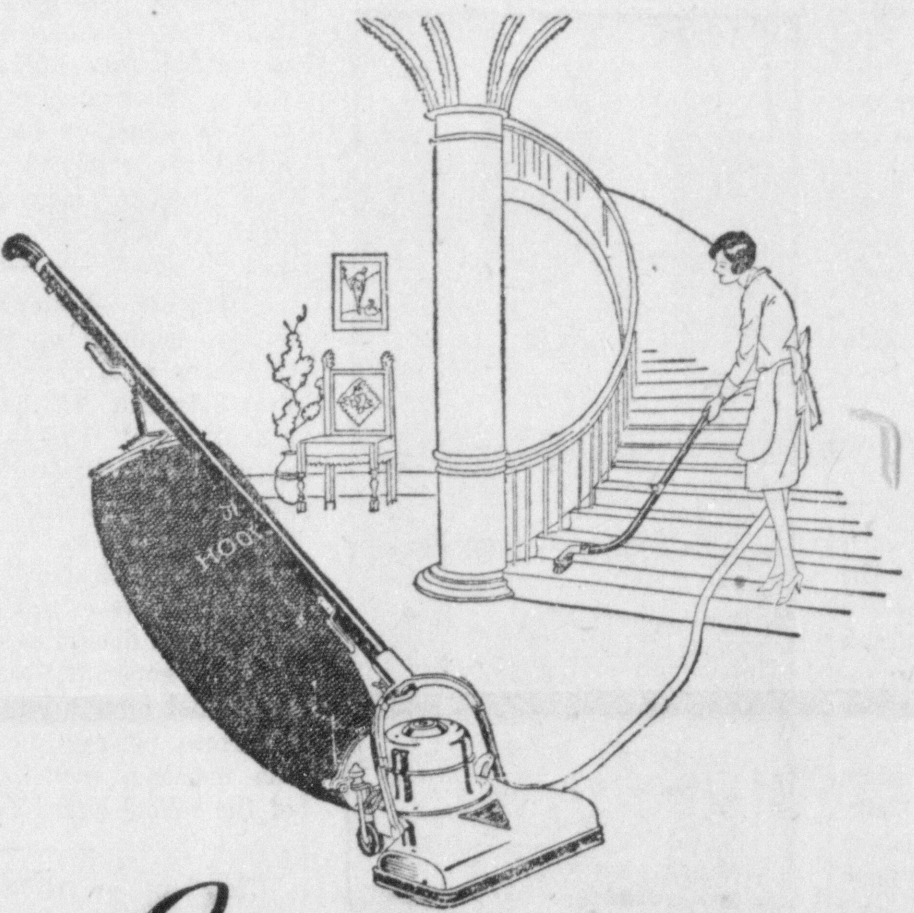

A very simple cold dessert that may be made before it is required, is blackberry mash. Bring a can of blackberries to a boil and sift in one-half cup sugar and one-quarter cup flour, stirring all the time. Pour into a mould, chill and serve with cream.

Any of the canned small fruits may be used thus.

Hot puddings are better used when the first part of the meal is very light or takes little work to prepare. Peach cake tastes good cold, but it is ambrosia itself when hot. Make it by adding extra butter and sugar to any good muffin batter. Spread on a shallow greased pan, and press into it thick slices of canned peaches, dusted with powdered sugar and cinnamon. Sprinkle with ground nut meats and bake in a moderate oven.

This steamed blueberry pudding may be cooked in advance and reheated when required: Sift together one and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking-powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one-quarter cup sugar. Add three tablespoons melted butter, beating it in thoroughly; then add two cups of canned blueberries from which the juice has been drained, and one-quarter cup milk. Serve with this a foamy sauce made by cooking together one cup brown sugar, two tablespoons water, and one tablespoon butter, then taking off the flame and beating into it a beaten egg.

Shop once a week and keep the supply shelf stocked with ingredients needed for these desserts, so that any one of them may be made at any time. There should always be some cans of mixed fruits for salads, white cherries, sour red cherries, moist cocoanut, dry shredded cocoanut peaches, apricots, blackberries and blueberries.

Spanish Mayor Learns Women Can't Be Bossed
Almendralejo, Spain.—The mayor of this mountain town near the Portuguese frontier is determined to save his woman constituents from the taint of short skirts and bobbed hair despite their assertions that they don't wish to be saved.

But his honor, Senor Francisco Montero de la Barrera, has adopted new tactics. He has abandoned his proposal to fine women who appear on the streets in short hair or abbreviated skirts. Instead he will present this year prizes to the two most charming maidens of his city of 13,000 inhabitants who maintain the old-fashioned long hair and skirts.

British Doctor Explains That Gum Chewing Habit
Birmingham, Eng.—"There's a reason" for chewing gum, it appears from an article written by Dr. W. J. Burns Selkirk, in the British Medical Journal. "Presumably," declares the writer, "it is analogous in effect to the baby's comforter. It seems capable of producing even the state of mind of the ruminating cow and its Buddhistic calm." The doctor also suggests that gum can be offered as a substitute for cigarettes to excessive smokers, that it is useful in curing the "chocolate habit," and that it acts as a sedative for frayed nerves and insomnia.

ENGLAND'S STORY REVEALED IN INNS
Faded Signs Tell Past of Many Villages.

Birmingham, England.—English villages in agricultural sections are often more than 1,000 years old, and bits of their history are often written in quaint signs which have survived for many centuries.

Next to the church, the inns and smithies are usually the oldest buildings in the villages which have not been engulfed by industries. Before the days of railways and motors the smithy was the center to which everyone had to go both in peace and in war.

Inn signs are particularly useful in tracing the history of villages, as they often show the seals or insignia of lords under whose protection the village thrived in past ages, and frequently indicate the past character of the neighborhood.

But the purely fanciful signs are even more interesting than those which have historical background. One sign, which used to be very common on old English inns, was the "Five Ails." The sign represents the king, "who governs all"; the bishop, "who prays for all"; the lawyer, "who pleads for all"; the soldier, "who fights for all"; and the laborer, "who works for all."

Although many individuals in direct line of descent link the present villagers with their ancestors before the Norman conquest, the villagers of today often know little about the history of their communities, and search of village records often yields little information about the early struggles of the tiny communities which are made up of low brown cottages screened by trees and vines.

Says He Has Found Lost City of Ophir

London.—After a search lasting 20 years, a British naval officer, Commander C. Crauford, declares he has discovered the lost lands of Ophir, whence the queen of Sheba brought to Solomon her magnificent gift of 33 tons of incense, spices, gold, jewels, apes, peacocks, pearls and other valuables. Lecturing to the United Services Institute recently, Commander Crauford said he found the city of Ophir exactly where it ought to be—in Arabia, about 400 miles east of Aden.

The city, with its ruined temple of God, is now little more than ruins, which have been visited by many seamen and political agents, he said, but they have never identified it. The commander suggested that excavations on the site would be richly repaid, and said that the land, which was mineral wealth, should be developed.

"The city is ideally situated," he said. "It has a harbor to the north and has a river which gives wharf space for a seaport. But a thin ribbon of coral sand is drawn across the harbor mouth. It is this strip of sand that strangled the life of Ophir. There is great wealth in Ophir still."

"Palestine now is the Palestine of King Saul. It lies in our power to develop the land to the prosperity of Solomon. There are gold mines and precious stones in the ground, a veritable Transvaal there."

French Alchemist Again Reports Making Gold

Paris.—France's modern alchemist, Jolivet Castelot of Douai, again is sure he is hot on the trail of the famed but unfound philosopher's stone with which the ancients believed base metals could be transmuted into gold.

This alchemist asserts his process of producing gold synthetically now is commercially profitable.

Out of six grams of silver, two of sulphur of antimony, one of orpiment and one of tin, he affirms, he has produced ten milligrams of gold.

He melts the metals, he says, heating them to 1,100 degrees Centigrade, and a complicated process ends in precipitating the gold.

The addition of tin, he says, has improved his earlier process. He claims that besides the gold, almost all the original quantity of silver is recoverable.

Briton Makes Bungalow of Air Liner Cabin

London.—Everyone knows that most English houses of any antiquity at all generally boast a small collection of spoils, but it is believed that no house on these islands is quite as "shady" as the summer home of Capt. G. H. Leverton, in Wallington, Surrey.

Through it roam the shades of 10,000 travelers who have flown over the city of London in the Vimy-Rolls Royce air liner of the Imperial Airways. After the big plane had outlived its usefulness flying from London to Paris, Captain Leverton bought it and turned the roomy cabin into a bungalow.

Hens to Lay Eggs for Apes to Steal
Odessa.—A shipload of 14 chimpanzees has arrived from Africa and will be established on the Soviet government's "monkey farm" at Suchum, in the Caucasus. The commissary of health is opening the monkey colony to breed a supply of animals for transplanting monkey glands to rejuvenate people.

Professor Ivanoff of the Leningrad Institute of Medicine accompanied the chimpanzees. He returned from a year's study and experiment in central Africa, where he made scientific tests of cross-breeding monkeys with other animals.

The "monkey farm" is in tropical Russia and has been prepared to make the chimpanzees feel at home. Even a flock of hens has been provided, to lay eggs which the chimpanzees can steal and suck as they do in Africa.

Hilt Made of Lapis Lazuli With Studs of Gold.

London.—A wonderful five thousand-year-old golden dagger was one of the many treasures of Ur described by Prof. Leonard Woolley, head of the British Museum section of the Anglo-American expedition which has been excavating the neighborhood of the birthplace of the patriarch Abraham. The flight of time is vividly depicted by Woolley in his latest report to the British museum when he emphasizes that many of the expedition's finds date from a period "more remote in time from Nebuchadnezzar than Nebuchadnezzar is from us, and 2,900 years or more older than the treasures of Tut-Ankh-Amen with which they challenge comparison."

The excavation work has just been closed for the "season," partly owing to lack of funds, but Woolley and his fellow-scientists strongly favor more extensive examination of the ruins for, as he says, "The further we go back the more elaborate and the more finished seems to be the art of Sumeria." At the end of the expedition's fifth season archaeologists and historians are now able to picture in detail the civilization of Mesopotamia in 3500 B. C., and "what is truly surprising is the wealth and the high level of the culture of that remote time."

As regards the dagger referred to, Woolley declares the hilt is made of one piece of deep blue lapis lazuli decorated with studs of gold; the blade is of gold, sharp and bright; the sheath, also of gold, is plain at the back, but in front covered with an exquisite design in filigree. With this was found a golden reticule also decorated with filigree, containing a tiny toilet set, tweezers, stiletto and spoon, all in gold. They were at least five thousand five hundred years old.

Seals of Kings.

Excavating the ancient cemeteries during recent weeks the expedition found cylinder seals of no fewer than five early kings, of whom three were unknown to history. It was when the excavators got below the two thousand-year-old graves that they made the best discoveries, for below these they found three thousand two hundred-year-old relics and, still lower, graves going back to 3,500 years before Christ.

The earliest graves were the richest, though naturally not all the treasures they once contained had survived the passage of time. There were no rock-cut chambers, hermetically sealed, such as preserved the woodwork and even the linen fabrics in Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb. In a land formed entirely of river silt, the ancients but dug a hole, laid at the bottom of it a square of matting, placed on this the body, draped likewise in a mat, with round it such offerings as they could afford, spread another mat over all and then filled up the pit again.

"Naturally after 5,500 years," says Woolley, "much has perished. Wood may have left a film of brown color in the soil, black tinder may represent the tasseled garments or the shroud of the dead, but that is all. Silver is generally reduced to powder, copper may survive, or may become green dust or splinters, the very bones of the man himself may have vanished; only gold remains untouched by time."

But although much has gone a vast deal was yet found to throw light on the earliest period of Mesopotamian history. During the last month of the expedition's work not a day passed that did not produce at least one gold object; vessels of pottery and stone; copper tools and weapons, beads and amulets turned up daily in bewildering numbers and every now and then there was a special prize in the shape of some unique monument of art.

A Gaming Board.

One such remarkable treasure was a gaming board. The actual wooden board had long since decayed, but the incrustation which had covered it remained in position in the earth. It was a difficult and lengthy task to lift without disturbing them the hundreds of tiny bits of inlay that composed it, but this was done at last and now it needs only to rebake and clean the mosaic to possess again, just as it originally was, this royal "chess board."

The edging of the board is of mother-of-pearl, the border of mother-of-pearl, ivory and lapis lazuli. The squares, divided by strips of blue lapis and red paste, are of shell engraved and inlaid with red and blue in geometrical designs. Woolley says it is indeed a triumph of ancient craftsmanship.

Incomes in U. S. Increased Billion Dollars in 1926

New York.—Total income in the United States among its 110,000,000 inhabitants was $78,649,000,000 for 1926, compared to $77,313,000,000 for the preceding year, the National Industrial conference board reports.

If the value of all goods and services produced in the country last year had been evenly divided, every man, woman and child would have received $671.43, the report says.

Pays Tribute

Andorra.—This tiny Pyrenean republic of 5,200 inhabitants has just paid its annual tribute of 1,400 francs (about $50) to its two "co-princes," the President of France and the Roman Catholic bishop of Urgel, Spain. For 649 years Andorra has paid tribute and enjoyed undisturbed sovereignty.

THE PICKAWAY DAUGHTERS OF THE REVOLUTION

Celebrate the One Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of Old Glory.

As June 14, was the 150th anniversary of the birth of our flag, Pickaway Plains Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, celebrated Flag day with a picnic at the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Dunlap, near Williamsport, as it was too cool to hold the picnic out-doors.

Thirty members and candidates were ushered to the dining room at noon, where a long table was loaded with all sorts of good things to eat, and each guest filled her plate as she marched around the table, thus carrying out the picnic idea. The hostess and her helpers served ice cream, strawberries and cake after the guests were seated in the living room.

At 2 o'clock the regent called the meeting to order and the Salute to the Flag was given, followed by all repeating the American's Creed. After the business session, Mrs. Charles Gerhardt spoke briefly of another and equally interesting anniversary to all Anglo-Saxons and one which all loyal Americans are asked to observe in addition to Flag Day, Magna Charta day, June 15. This day was selected because the great charter is the foundation of our civil and religious liberty. Hon. Elihu Root said that "it was the greatest of all events in the political development of modern liberty."

Mrs. Harp Van Riper read an intensely interesting article published in The Christian Herald, "The Making of our Flag." The regent read excerpts from the "National Republic," a patriotic magazine on National Defense. Mrs. George P. Hunsicker and Miss Marie Hamilton read historical jingles of the wonderful story of the United States, which started "In 1492, when Columbus sailed the ocean blue" up to the present time. Mrs. Orion King read a poem, "Freedom's Banner."

Mrs. George P. Foresman announced that she had received no definite information about the grave of Hezekiah Van Durn, who settled near Circleville about 1797, and is buried nearby. She also asked for information concerning Anthony Hall's descendants, as she has located his grave and learned that he was a revolutionary soldier.

This was the last meeting until the new year starts in October and all agreed that the last was the best, in spite of the chilly weather.

Smart Dog

Lassie is a smart dog, indeed, and her mistress has taught her some very clever tricks. For instance, the Mrs. will say: "Lassie, are you a Republican?" Thereupon Lassie will bark quite sharply, indicating that she is really of that political faith.

Late one night the Mr. and Mrs. were awakened by Lassie's loud barking in the kitchen, and the Mrs. finally became uneasy.

"I believe there's some one in the house," she whispered.

"It's only Lassie holding a Republican caucus," grunted the Mr. half-asleep.

Woman Boiler Worker

Overalled and gloved and her face covered with a steel mask, the only woman acetylene welder in the country is rapidly completing the biggest boiler ever constructed in the boiler works at Wildwood, N. J. She is Mrs. Catherine Nelson, of Stelton, N. J., and the mother of two children. In addition to welding the torch, Mrs. Nelson bosses the labor of several men. Before the World war increased the demand for women in industry, Mrs. Nelson was a dressmaker.

New York Noisiest City

Owing to the tremendous amount of subway construction going on at the present time, New York is undoubtedly the noisiest city in the world. A rat-tat-tat of pneumatic riveters is heard all day long. This, combined with the thousands of other noises, taxes the nervous system enormously. To lessen this wear and tear on the nerves, rubber ear plugs are now on sale in many of the drug stores.—Cap-per's Weekly.

Paper From Hardwoods

The United States Department of Agriculture has announced the development of a new process for making newsprint from hardwoods. It is believed the process will assist materially in continuing the newsprint supply from aspen and birch and possibly maple in the northeastern region and in developing of a newsprint industry in southern states for gumwood.

Wandering and Waiting

THEOPHILUS MERCER was noted for his practical jokes. The day before he died he said to his medical attendant: "Doctor, I have played many a joke in my time; and now I am going to play a last one. The joke is mainly on Harry, but it's on the public, too." Before the setting of another sun his joking and his days were ended forever. When they looked into his affairs the nature of his last joke was apparent.

Theophilus Mercer, the high liver, the free spender, the man whose name was synonymous with wealth and prodigality, did not leave enough to pay his funeral expenses—if his creditors had all pressed their claims. His son, Harry, aged twenty-two, not long out of college, was astounded, bewildered. His father had always supplied him liberally with money and he had come to look upon the supply as inexhaustible.

Harry's mother had died when he was an infant, he had neither brother nor sister nor near relative; he was alone in the world with no money and no occupation.

The greatest wrench of all to him was the necessity he felt for postponing indefinitely his marriage with Mary Southland—perhaps breaking off their engagement altogether. He went to Mary and told her the whole story. Ten dollars in his pocket was every cent he had in the world; Mary had been reared in luxury. To take her from that luxury to a life of utter destitution—he loved her too well for that. Until he could support a wife in some degree of comfort he ought not to take one.

He did not dare trust himself to see Mary again, but wrote her a letter, asking her to wait for him. Then he shipped aboard a tanker bound for San Diego by way of the canal.

As they say in the "movies," "an interval of eight years is supposed to have elapsed." Harry Mercer was home again. A paragraph in the papers announced the fact and the news soon spread that he had returned financially rehabilitated. At any rate, he represented a great corporation which was exploiting copper mines in Alaska and was "on the map" once more.

Harry sat in his room at his hotel gazing at an invitation on the table before him. Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Hemingway requested the pleasure of his company at dinner on Wednesday night. This was Monday. Could he bear meeting Mary Southland again as the wife of another? Yes; why not? His love for her was still a part of his very being but had been mellowed by time. The dream of his youth was in "that deep, deep gulf where things that might have been and never were are always wandering." She had written him at San Diego promising to wait—for years if necessary. At San Diego he had left the ship and begun a series of wanderings in Central America and finally in Alaska. Sometimes mail reached him in the far, wild regions to which he penetrated; more often it did not.

He had warned Mary of this and was not surprised when, occasionally, he received a letter from her and it contained references to previous letters which he had never received. Every now and then, from out-of-the-way places, he sent off letters to her, some of which got through and some of which did not.

Harry was in Alaska and had come down to Sitka from a long trip up somewhere near the Arctic circle when he met a man from his home city whom he had known slightly in former days. He was thirsty for news from home. "By the way," said the garrulous purveyor of it, "old Southland's daughter—the pretty one—what was her name?"

"Mary," suggested Harry. "Mary, was it? Yes, I guess that was the name; but no matter"—went on the gossip—"she was married to Gus Hemingway—mighty rich fellow—just before I left home."

Harry never wrote to Mary after that. He started the next day for the Aleutian islands and was lost to civilization for a year. Finally came his connection with the copper company, his fortunes mended. He could look to the future confidently as far as money was concerned.

Eight years and he was back in his home town, gazing thoughtfully at a dinner invitation. He wondered how Mary looked now. Had she changed? She must be twenty-nine years old now; but he felt that she would always look to him as she did when he saw her last. How the years had gone by! Why, that lanky young sister of Mary's, all eyes and elbows—she must be a young lady by now.

When Mercer entered the Hemingway drawing room on Wednesday night, one of the most beautiful women he had ever seen came sweeping toward him with both hands held out. "Oh, Harry!" she cried; "confess, now, you never would have recognized me in the world. Don't you remember Mary's homely little sister, Agatha? 'Aggie' you used to call me. Come here till I introduce you to my husband. Mary will be down in a minute. When she heard you were home again she was all a-tremble. She's an old maid—been waiting for you all these years. You have got a lot of explaining to do. Just think, I was sixteen when you went away and I'm twenty-four now. Mary is nearly thirty. Here she comes, now."

FOLKSBURG ITEMS

The writer was obliged to put in most of the time today mowing the yard on account of it was beginning to attract considerable attention. And seemed like we never realized before what a vast territory a fifty foot front can be when it gets the jump on a dull lawn mower.

Tom Jackson strained his side a little yesterday while he was trying to reach a newspaper on the floor without getting up out of his chair.

Grover Morgan and his wife started to drive over to Nashville last Tuesday, but they got on the wrong road and finally came back. It being a strange way, Mrs. Morgan tried to help Grover pick the route, and when he was completely lost she said she didn't see how he could have got so far off the right road. And he said he couldn't if she hadn't helped him.

We've had two fire alarms now in less than a week and neither one amounted to anything. And several people felt like they'd been cheated last night when the fire bell rang and they got up and rushed out of the picture show when it wasn't more than half over and then it was a false alarm.

Somebody told Miss Sadie Baxter that they saw a girl over at Newport that's the identical image of her, and now Sadie can't rest easy until she meets up with that person and sees does she approve of her appearance.

Nath Atkins, who is the watchman at the railroad crossing, was aggravated a good deal last Saturday when somebody with a perverted sense of humor moved his iron bench out of the sun while he was away at noon, and it got so hot that he had to stand up for nearly an hour while it cooled off.

Miss Mellie Robbins had a caller from Albany last Sunday and she's been making several inquiries among her friends to find out what they think of him. And the general opinion seems to be that he ranked tolerably high for appearance, but somehow he didn't give the impression that he'd always be there to go to the door when the rent comes due.

Uncle Bill Bobbitt was speaking yesterday of how a lot of people are so terrible busy these days, and they act like they think everything is in their hands and if they don't keep rushing something will go wrong. And he said if they could calm down and reflect on nature a little, why maybe it would help them understand that they don't have to take all the responsibility—for keeping things moving.

Enoch Budd, who is beginning to get bald on top of his head, has asked Sam Price, our barber, wouldn't it be fair to knock off some of the cost of a hair cut on account of that bald spot.

Among other things that used to provide entertainment and have now passed away, Andrew Allen mentioned recently that you hardly ever any more see a neighbor begin the day with a lot of sudden activity in carrying all of the bedsteads out into the back yard and start sousing them with boiling water and coal oil.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Evans have talked considerable at times about which one of them their young son, Chester, takes after the most. And yesterday when Mrs. Evans sent him to the store for something and he lost the money on the way, why Howard definitely got the credit for Chester's main characteristics.

Italy Reclaims Land

Nearly 1,900,000 acres of swamp land in Italy is being reclaimed and completion of the projects will have cost approximately $90,000,000. It is hoped that six-sevenths of the work now in course of operation will be finished by 1935. Other proposals call for the reclamation of 1,900,000 additional acres.

NATIONAL PROMENADE BAND WILL GO TO PARIS, FRANCE, CONVENTION

One of the finest musical organizations in the United States, the National Promenade band of Greenville, Ohio, will go abroad to attend the ninth annual convention of The American Legion to be held in Paris September 19 to 23, J. J. Saslavsky, 335 South High street, Columbus, department France convention officer, has informed Howard P. Savage, national commander of the legion. Movement of this splendid band, which took first prize at both the St. Paul and Philadelphia national conventions of the Legion, was made possible by the Eighty-seventh General Assembly of Ohio in appropriating $12,000, approximately $300 each for the Ohio musicians to defray expenses. The National Promenade band, of the "40 and 8," play and honor society of the Legion made up of men of the Erk Cottrell Post No. 140, has provided the official music for the national promenades at the New Orleans, St. Paul, Omaha and Philadelphia conventions of the national organization. Leviathan, official flagship of the legion fleet of vessels. The bandmen will return on the SS. Republic on October 1. A number of bands and drill teams will attend the Paris convention. The Iowa legislature recently appropriated $50,000 to take the Fort Dodge drum and bugle corps the Manahan Post band and the Davenport Auxiliary girls drill team abroad. The New York legislature appropriated $10,000 to send the state championship Oneida bugle band to Paris. Variety of Meanings Traceable to "Stuff"

The word stuff is probably from the Latin "stuppa," meaning tow or okum. Used as a noun, stuff has a variety of meanings, all more or less related. For example, it means the material which is to be worked up in any process of manufacture. It also means especially woven material, cloth not made into garments, fabric; or the meaning is restricted to textile made entirely of worsted. Another meaning is refuse or worthless matter, or unorganized language, nonsense. The word has a special meaning in nautical affairs. Here stuff is the name given to a melted mass of turpentine and tallow with which are smeared the masts, sides, and bottom of a ship.

AMUSEMENTS

Attesting to the tremendous popularity of Adolphe Menjou was the enthusiastic audience that greeted the initial showing of his latest Paramount starring vehicle "Evening Clothes" at the Mct theater last night. Menjou again cast as a continental, draws from a well stocked repertoire to run thru all the human emotions in reels of sheer entertainment.
In the opening scenes in the French countryside, he treats to a perfect characterization of the gentleman French farmer, a role that is different from anything he has even done before. But as Lucien D'Artois of the landed gentry, he is as convincing as he has always been as a 'Gentleman of Paris.'
The story concerns itself first of all with the failure of Lucien to please Germaine (Virginia Valli) his bride. She has been brought up in the social circles of Paris, and is unable to understand his countryfied ways. She marries him not thru love, but in deference to the wishes of her parents. When she leaves Menjou on the day of their wedding, he determines to remake himself in order to win her affection.
The scene of the story shifts to Paris, where Menjou is moulding himself into a boulevardier. Here he assumes the polished sophistication that made him famous. His failure to win back his wife leads him to a life of frivolity and he soon dissipates his fortune. Menjou poverty-stricken is a humorous as well as a noble character. The crowning touch is when nothing is left of his former affluence except a dress suit which incidentally is the only suit he has. His attempts at nonchalance while walking in evening clothes down the street in broad daylight, give rise to many humorous situations.
Germaine's final recapitulation comes only after an intensely dramatic episode.
Luther Reed, who directed Menjou in his recent hit, "The Ace of Cads," directed "Evening Clothes." In support are Noah Beery, Louise Brooks and Lido Manetti.

A ballad is a simple song, where each verse is sung to the same music. Song has a very broad interpretation, and has many varieties. There is the simple folk song, much the same as the ballad, and the art song, where each verse is set to different music. The dictionary gives 16 different name songs, which vary in character and sentiment.

DR. LOOMISIS FREED IN SLAY-ING OF WIFE

Physician and Surgeon Is Acquitted After Jury Deliberates 32 Minutes.

Detroit, June 16.—After deliberating 32 minutes, a recorder's court jury today acquitted Dr. Frank R. Loomis, a physician and surgeon, charged with slaying his wife, Grace Burns Loomis, the night of last Feb. 22.

Mrs. Loomis' body was found on the sun room floor of the Loomis home. She had been clubbed to death. Finding of the body was reported to police by Dr. Loomis, who said he made the discovery after he returned from a 45-minute walk in the neighborhood.

He assigned robbery as a possible motive, saying he had given Mrs. Loomis $100 for the purchase of some clothing before he left the house. The money was not found.

The prosecution contended that the physician was in the house at the time his wife is thought to have been slain, and produced witnesses who testified they heard moans from the family home before 9 o'clock, the hour Dr. Loomis said he left for the walk.

Hungarian FencerWas in 10,000 Duels

Budapest. — Ten thousand duels, fought, arranged or attended, was the record that enabled Karl Fodor, fencing master, to die happy.

Fodor died recently after a celebration in honor of his ten thousandth duel, which was in his fencing rooms. For forty years Budapest duels were held, as a rule, in his quarters. He presided over the many political sword quarrels of Count Tisza. He saw behind the scenes of most of the political differences and society scandals of his time.

His most famous affair was the duel of Count Etienne Keglevitch and Deputy Karl Hencz. It was to be a deadly fight, but it ended before it started. The count, very near-sighted, ran against his adversary's sword before the signal for the start and was killed.

The Compose and Jacket Suit for Spring Is a Distinct Feature of the Season's Fashions

GWEN LEE

WITH the advent of warmer weather, the compose suit becomes increasingly important. Trim tailcoats with dark jackets and skirts of contrasting materials, noticeably gray, are the vogue of the moment for general daytime wear, if one looks well in the severe cut of a masculine tailor.

More feminine in appeal are the jacket ensembles worn with frocks of contrasting colors and fabrics.

These may be developed in the fashionable black and white vogue in satin or of entirely different combinations in materials and colors.

One of the smartest of these suits is the ensemble worn by Gwen Lee in "Heaven on Earth," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. The one piece frock is of natural kasha with an accompanying jacket of black velvet lined with the kasha and scalloped in front. A black felt hat is worn with this costume.

Venus Favors Fruit

DARK purple grapes glistening with Olympian dew, cherries the flaming red of setting suns, pears bronzed by warm scented zephyrs, and in the center a pineapple—food of earthly kings, golden, majestic.

These, in a gorgeous basket, Hebe, cup-bearer of the Olympian gods, offered to Venus. Smiling, Venus surveyed the rare fruits, marveled at their rainbow colorings and reaching out with her fair arm, she chose the golden pineapple, Monarch of Fruits.

Whether we revel in mythological lore, or delight in tales of beautiful women—beauty holds us enthralled.

And out of the heart of fine-fruits, springs beauty. Fruit, about 80 per cent water, cleanses the body and brings glowing color to the skin. Its mineral wealth produces bone strength, the crude fiber aids digestion and gives to beautiful teeth the resistance they need; the fruit sugars stimulate and nourish without fattening; an abundance of vitamins builds up the tissues.

The pineapple which Venus chose, has further charms. Cultivated now in Hawaii, the land of sunshine, it has absorbed sunny flavor and rich nutriment. Bromelin, secreted in its juices, soothes the throat and aids digestion. And so that all parts of the world may have the royal Hawaiian pineapple ripe and therefore at its best, it is packed in cans in Hawaii immediately as it leaves the fields, where it has stored away health and beauty-giving riches.

Thus today, the modern Venus may have her choice fruits at all seasons—and Hebes of many lands bear for her treasures which rival rare fruits of Olympia.

Shiftless Folk

A small negro boy, aged six, in Goochland county, Virginia, accompanied his father to Richmond recently, his first visit to the city. "How did you like it in town?" some one asked him, on his return. "Hit's all right," replied the little darkey, "but Jes' walkin' aroun'—Ah doan' see how dey makes a livin'."

Lengthy Humans

There have been reports among the less civilized tribes and among certain savage peoples that men have measured as much as 15 feet. From actual records that have been compiled, the greatest height found was that of Topinard's Finlander, who measured 112 inches.

30,000 School ChildrenDie on Roads in 5 Years

Washington. — Thirty thousand school children, most of them less than thirteen, were killed on the highways during the five-year period ending January 1, 1927, the American Road Builders' association stated recently. A survey of accident conditions over this period revealed that more than 3,000,000 persons had been sent to hospitals as a result of street and highway accidents, in addition to the loss of more than 100,000 lives.

BLEAK PACIFIC ISLE MAY SOLVE ORIGIN OF INDIANS

Primitive People on Nunivak May Be Connecting Link With Ancient Mongolians.

Anchorage, Alaska.—Far out in Bering sea lies Nunivak Island. On this bleak bit of land, 70 miles long by perhaps 50 wide, lives a tribe or tribes of people who may be the link connecting the American Indians with the people of ancient Mongolia.

Washed on all sides by treacherous shoals and beaten continually by roaring, pitching surf, ships have always given Nunivak island a wide berth. Only once a year the government cutters or the Boxer of the United States bureau of education dare send a boat ashore.

The landing parties always came back with tales of the most primitive peoples in Alaska. The natives are divergent from the mainland tribes and retain many of the ancient customs of the original native.

If they came directly from Siberia or Mongolia there will be something on the island to connect them with the Asiatic land. Noted scientists, Henry B. Collier and T. Dale Stewart, both of Washington, D. C., are aboard the Boxer en route to Nunivak. They will try to discover how long man has inhabited the island. To do this they intend to dig deep into the old soil, turn out the sepulchers, and unearth utensils, weapons, and relics to add to museum collections.

The scientists will make measurements of the native physique, records of their language and observations of tribal customs and art. The Nunivak tribes have lived on the island for hundreds of years, with comparatively little contact with white man's civilization. It is expected they will possess furs, curios, ivory, and perhaps gold to barter for trade goods.

With music and magic tricks the scientists hope to win their confidence and procure aid in the search from now until late September of ethnological data. A study of the fauna and flora of the island will be made by the scientists.

The five-day week has been a bug-bear to many an employer, but think how near we have come to it already. A hundred years ago the workman labored for 12 hours a day for six days a week, and in return got shelter, food and clothing and not much of any of them. Now, in many industries, the 44-hour week is common, so that the step to 40 hours is short.

And the employers' habits have changed. The afternoon off for golf, the winter vacation in addition to one in the summer, the week-end that begins on Friday afternoon—how many are shocked by these?

The sage Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York American league baseball team, thinks his possession worth $3,000,000, due to the added leisure of Americans. And golf, he says, has added to the attendance at baseball parks. Interest in one has aroused interest in the other.—Nation's Business.

Use Soap and Water Now as Disinfectant

Disinfectants like carbolic are rapidly being replaced by the constant application of plain soap and water to persons, rooms, and appliances. Soap and water do their work by the simple method of removing all dirt—the material in which germs thrive—and, in fact, when they work in co-operation they are perfect disinfectants.

Some authorities, said a doctor recently, have more or less abandoned the usual disinfection after the recovery of the patient, and have substituted the constant use of soap and water for the household, and for infected clothing.

Great destruction is worked among germs, particularly the typhoid bacilli, by soap that contains coconut oil, while scientific investigations into the effect of hot water and common soap on certain types of germs have demonstrated its efficiency as a germicide.

OSTEOPATHIC CONVENTION

Dr. W. H. Wilderson, 118 North Scioto street, has received an invitation to attend a unique convention of his osteopathic college class on Pike's Peak on July 30.

This reunion is to be one of the social features in connection with the International osteopathic convention which will meet in Denver the last week of July.

Many osteopathic college classes are arranging reunions at one or another of the countless spots of beauty within reasonable distance of Denver.

The doctors who have been advising all their patients to undergo thorough health examinations will have a chance to set a good example at this convention. A group of diagnostic experts will be in attendance to examine the doctors themselves very thoroughly, along the lines of general physical condition, heart, lungs, digestive tract, nerves, eye, ear, nose and throat, X-ray, blood, excretions, secretions and everything else it takes to round out the thorough structural examination of the body machine which is the basic part of all osteopathic diagnosis.

Dr. Wilderson is a graduate of the American School of Osteopathy in 1899.

BETTER SERVICE AND MORE TIRE MILEAGE

Changing From One Wheel To Another Distributes Wear More Evenly.

Changing tires around from time to time will result in longer tire life and better all 'round service, according to George E. Hammel of this city agent for Firestone dealers in Circleville.

"When a motorist buys a new spare, we recommend that he put it on the right rear and give that tire a rest for a while," he stated. "The other tires should be changed, too, left front to left rear, etc. Each wheel puts certain strains on a tire different from that of the other wheels and by using the tire on each in turn the wear is evenly distributed and the tire lasts longer and gives better service."

"It is also important to have tires looked over frequently for minor cuts and bruises, etc., and to have small repairs made promptly. Tires should be inflated to the correct pressure as under-inflation of a few pounds will often result in the loss of hundreds of miles of useful service. Valve caps, screwed down tightly by hand, should always be used to prevent air leaks."

"If motorists will give their tires ordinary care and attention their will have less trouble and enjoy greater tire satisfaction."

The 4-H Clothing club, of Jackson township, held its fourth meeting at the schoolhouse, June 15, and twenty-one members answered the roll call.

In the morning the first year girls sewed on their aprons, while the second year girls drafted their nightgown patterns and sewed on their gowns. It was found that most of the girls were getting along nicely with their work.

After we had eaten our lunch our meeting was called to order by President Bertha Carle. Devotional services were in charge of Annabelle Barch. Demonstrations were given by Bertha Carle, "How to Alter Patterns;" Caroline Rowe and Charlotte Peters, "How to Draft a Nightgown Pattern;" Lenora Grubbs and Elizabeth Fischer, "How to Choose Proper Shape Facings."

After the meeting we had recreation hour during which we enjoyed a good time.

The next meeting will be held at the schoolhouse July 1, at 10 a. m.

Prunes Now Packed in Many Ways

THE story of the rise of the erstwhile humble prune to one of today's choicest fruits has for its climax that turning point in its career when it was first grown in the United States. Until as recently as 1890 almost the entire supply of prunes was imported from Europe. Today, we not only supply our own prune needs but those of Europe as well.

Today, when prunes are served as a delicacy, as well as a staple, and are a recognized health food, they can be bought in a variety of forms. Canned prunes are now available packed in juice or dry-packed, and there are also prunes in cardboard packages.

The canned product ranges from small "individual" size cans holding eight or nine prunes up to the gallon size.

The cans of dry packed prunes come in three sizes: one pound, one pound twelve ounces, and five pounds. These are not stewed prunes, but as the name implies, dried prunes packed in tins to retain the flavor. Slow, dry cooking under a special vacuum process makes them moist and tender.

Prunes canned in juice are perhaps the most delicious that can be obtained. They, too, are selected fruit, cooked to a degree which has made them tender but yet firm, and the rich juice adds greatly to their flavor.

The American prune, raised in California and the Pacific states, is a direct descendant of the famous French "prune d'agen" which a Frenchman planted in his fruit garden in the Santa Clara valley in 1856. The Santa Clara valley remains the greatest prune-producing district and the "prune d'agen" is still supreme—famous for its aromatic flavor, high sugar content, dense texture and small stone.

The nutritive value of prunes is well known. For generations people have eaten prunes for their healthful properties, even before the choicer prunes were obtainable. They contain a large content of easily digested sugar which supplies bodily energy very quickly. The roughage furnished by the skins and the tart juices act as a laxative.

is made by stoning contents of a can of dry-packed prunes. Cut them in halves; season cottage cheese and form in flat cakes. Place four halves of prunes on each and serve on lettuce leaves with French dressing.

With cold meats, Spiced Prunes are an appetizing addition. Bring one-half cup each of sugar and vinegar and one teaspoon each of cinnamon and cloves to the boiling point. Add a medium can of dry-packed prunes and boil gently for fifteen minutes.

Prune and Rice Loaf with Cheese Sauce will be found excellent. Boil half a cup of rice, drain and reserve the stock. Stone and chop one-pound can of dry-packed prunes and add to rice with one cup of chopped nuts, one egg well beaten, one and one-half teaspoons salt, and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Pour into a greased loaf pan and bake thirty minutes in moderate oven. For cheese sauce, add one-half cup of grated cheese to one cup of thin white sauce in which one cup of rice has been used for the liquid. After adding cheese, beat until it is melted and serve immediately.

LINDY PRAISES, BILLY RAPS

Washington, June 16.—(U.P.)—With former Colonel "Billy" Mitchell continuing his attacks on the Navy Department for alleged carelessness in dealing with his plane, "Spirit of St. Louis," Charles Lindbergh today, in a telegram to the Washington Post, complimented the personnel at the naval air station who handled his machine.

Lindbergh expressed his "sincere appreciation for the prompt and efficient manner in which they cared for my plane."

In the same issue, the Post printed a second communication from Mitchell in which he accused the navy of "propaganda," said the ill-fated Shenandoah was sent out in a storm without adequate maps, charged that Commander Rogers' flight to Hawaii was also inadequately arranged and added:

"The same incompetence has recently resulted in the navy killing 16 men in about 35 days around Norfolk."

WORLD'S HOTTEST AND COLDEST SPOTS

Siberia Holds Record With 90.4 Degrees Below.

Washington.—Days are coming when we shall enjoy just thinking of the coldest spot on earth. That imaginary comfort may be enhanced by a knowledge of the exact time and location of the coldest known temperature. Verkhoyansk, Siberia, just within the Arctic circle, experienced 90.4 degrees below zero Fahrenheit on January 15, 1885. It was unofficially reported that this same place recently broke the above record with 97.6 degrees below.

However, do not start for Verkhoyansk for your vacation, for the temperature rises to 80 degrees during the two-month summer. Miles City, Mont., holds the low record for the United States with 65 degrees below.

It may help the fellow who must enjoy the sea breeze of an electric fan to know of a hotter spot than his own chair. The Italian meteorological station of Azizia registered 136.4 degrees Fahrenheit in the shade on September 13, 1922. Azizia is in the semi-desert plain of Jefara, northern Africa. The mean annual temperature for this region is 70.8 degrees.

Before Azizia established her hottest day California's similar arid inland plain held the world's record with 134 degrees in the shade. This was at Greenland ranch on the edge of Death valley, where the thermometer goes higher than 120 degrees every summer. Officials at the weather bureau question Azizia's record because the conditions under which the 136.4 degrees were obtained were not certainly proper. However, this may be the American desire for bigger and better climate, as Prof. Filippo Eredia saw the establishment of the meteorological station at the Italian settlement in 1913 and took great pains to insure the accurate functioning of the instruments after approved methods.

Though summer out-of-doors recreation is tempting, the need for vacations is apparently greater in winter than in summer. Scientific investigation has discovered that it is a great mistake to speed up at the end of January while in May nature lends her aid and human energy is increased. We are still more energetic in October.

Nervous America might well change her habit and relax in winter vacations when the need for slowing up is greatest.

What Shall We Have For Dessert?

DESSERTS are not a burden if they are prepared well in advance. If they are made early in the day or even the day before, the housewife may go out shopping, or may take tea with a friend, without worrying about her dinner.

Some desserts are much better for having been made the day before, for instance this crème-brouillée. It is made by bringing to a boil two cups of evaporated milk, taking it off the flame and stirring into it four eggs, three tablespoons sugar and a pinch of salt, all of which have been beaten thoroughly together. Place in double boiler and continue stirring five minutes. Pour into pudding dish to cool. Top with either brown sugar or drained canned fruit mixed with powdered sugar.

Arrangements for pineapple-marshmallow fruit cup must be made early in the morning. Cut into halves one pound of marshmallows and let soak all day in the juice of crushed pineapple. At dinner-time add the pineapple, put into sherbet glasses and top with whipped cream.

Chestnuts, served so often and variously on the "continent," are rather neglected in America, though they are delicious either in the stuffing of fowl or in desserts, and may be purchased in any sizable city at reasonable prices. This chestnut purée is extremely good and is unusual enough to have for a special company dessert. Soak two pounds of chestnuts, peel, masn, add sugar, vanilla, and enough evaporated milk to bind the mixture together. Put on individual plates in mounds; garnish with whipped cream slices of canned pear, and lady fingers.

Any kind of fruit sponge proves a popular dessert, the following, made with cherries, particularly so. Heat a can of cherries and strain off the juice. Soak one tablespoon gelatine in a little water and add to the hot juice. Chill. When it begins to harden, beat it and add the whites of two or three well-beaten eggs. Pour into a mold with alternate layers of cherries. Chill. Turn out and garnish with whipped cream to which sugar and vanilla have been added. Coconut blanc mange is nice made in individual portions. Stir three tablespoons cornstarch in a little milk and cook in two cups of milk. Add one-half cup of sugar and three beaten eggs, then a cup of canned coconut, a pinch of salt and a tablespoon of vanilla. Pour into cups, cool, and set in the refrigerator. Use the remainder of the coconut as a garnish, along with little mounds of raspberry or apple jelly. The canned coconut is so moist and fresh that it is delicious in this blanc mange.

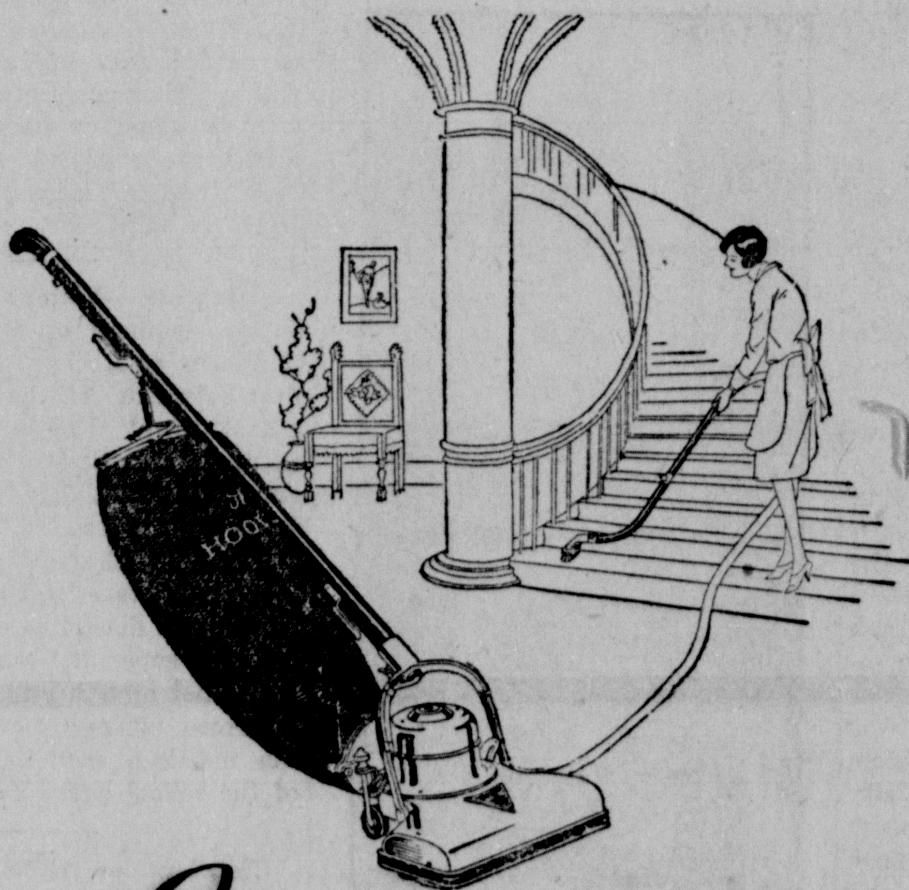

A very simple cold dessert that may be made before it is required, is blackberry mash. Bring a can of blackberries to a boil and sift in one-half cup sugar and one-quarter cup flour, stirring all the time. Pour into a mould, chill and serve with cream.

Any of the canned small fruits may be used thus.

Hot puddings are better used when the first part of the meal is very light or takes little work to prepare. Peach cake tastes good cold, but it is ambrosia itself when hot. Make it by adding extra butter and sugar to any good muffin batter. Spread on a shallow greased pan, and press into it thick slices of canned peaches, dusted with powdered sugar and cinnamon. Sprinkle with ground nut meats and bake in a moderate oven.

This steamed blueberry pudding may be cooked in advance and reheated when required: Sift together one and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking-powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one-quarter cup sugar. Add three tablespoons melted butter, beating it in thoroughly; then add two cups of canned blueberries from which the juice has been drained, and one-quarter cup milk. Serve with this a foamy sauce made by cooking together one cup brown sugar, two tablespoons water, and one tablespoon butter, then taking off the flame and beating into it a beaten egg.

Shop once a week and keep the supply shelf stocked with ingredients needed for these desserts, so that any one of them may be made at any time. There should always be some cans of mixed fruits for salads, white cherries, sour red cherries, moist coconut, dry shredded coconut, peaches, apricots, blackberries and blueberries.

BLEAK PACIFIC ISLE MAY SOLVE ORIGIN OF INDIANS

Primitive People on Nunivak May Be Connecting Link With Ancient Mongolians.

Anchorage, Alaska.—Far out in Bering sea lies Nunivak island. On this bleak bit of land, 70 miles long by perhaps 50 wide, lives a tribe or tribes of people who may be the link connecting the American Indians with the people of ancient Mongolia.

Washed on all sides by treacherous shoals and benten continually by roaring, pitching surf, ships have always given Nunivak island a wide berth. Only once a year the government cutters or the Boxer of the United States bureau of education dare send a boat ashore.

The landing parties always came back with tales of the most primitive peoples in Alaska. The natives are divergent from the mainland tribes and retain many of the ancient customs of the original native.

If they came directly from Siberia or Mongolia there will be something on the island to connect them with the Asiatic land. Noted scientists, Henry B. Collier and T. Dale Stewart, both of Washington, D. C., are aboard the Boxer en route to Nunivak. They will try to discover how long man has inhabited the island. To do this they intend to dig deep into the old soil, turn out the sepulchers, and unearth utensils, weapons, and relics to add to museum collections.

The scientists will make measurements of the native physique, records of their language and observations of tribal customs and art. The Nunivak tribes have lived on the island for hundreds of years, with comparatively little contact with white man's civilization. It is expected they will possess furs, curios, ivory, and perhaps gold to barter for trade goods.

With music and magic tricks the scientists hope to win their confidence and procure aid in the search from now until late September of ethnological data. A study of the fauna and flora of the island will be made by the scientists.

Bargain in Train Fares Hits Even Baby Buggies

Glasgow, Scotland.—Merry-go-rounds and even the donkeys in the children's playgrounds have been hard hit by the bargain-rate fare of the Glasgow tramways, which give a two-hour ride for a fraction less than 4 cents.

Baby carriage manufacturers, too, have been affected by the cheap rate tickets. Their business has fallen off because mothers have found it convenient to allow the nurse to take baby for a street-car ride instead of pushing the youngster about the park. This innovation also has had a tendency to make the nurses more content with their tasks and saves shoe leather besides.

Since the twenty-one mile ride for two coppers was inaugurated last July more than 60,000,00 passengers have made use of it—an increase of 13,000,000 over the previous year—and given the corporation an additional revenue of $55,000.

Automobile and motor cycle dealers who specialized in little family cars designed for the average working man say their business has suffered more than the baby carriage trade, because a car ride now is cheaper than buying gasoline.

WORKERS NOW FIND TIME FOR LEISURE

The five-day week has been a bug-bear to many an employer, but think how near we have come to it already. A hundred years ago the workman labored for 12 hours a day for six days a week, and in return got shelter, food and clothing and not much of any of them. Now, in many industries, the 44-hour week is common, so that the step to 40 hours is short.

And the employers' habits have changed. The afternoon off for golf, the winter vacation in addition to one in the summer, the week-end that begins on Friday afternoon—how many are shocked by these?

The sage Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York American league baseball team, thinks his possession worth $3,000,000, due to the added leisure of Americans. And golf, he says, has added to the attendance at baseball parks. Interest in one has aroused interest in the other.—Nation's Business.

Use Soap and Water Now as Disinfectant

Disinfectants like carbolic are rapidly being replaced by the constant application of plain soap and water to persons, rooms, and appliances. Soap and water do their work by the simple method of removing all dirt—the material in which germs thrive—and, in fact, when they work in co-operation they are perfect disinfectants.

Some authorities, said a doctor recently, have more or less abandoned the usual disinfection after the recovery of the patient, and have substituted the constant use of soap and water for the household, and for infected clothing.

Great destruction is worked among germs, particularly the typhoid bacilli, by soap that contains coconut oil, while scientific investigations into the effect of hot water and common soap on certain types of germs have demonstrated its efficiency as a germicide.

OSTEOPATHIC CONVENTION

Dr. W. H. Wilderson, 118 North Scioto street, has received an invitation to attend a unique convention of his osteopathic college class on Pike's Peak on July 30.

This reunion is to be one of the social features in connection with the International osteopathic convention which will meet in Denver the last week of July.

Many osteopathic college classes are arranging reunions at one or another of the countless spots of beauty within reasonable distance of Denver.

The doctors who have been advising all their patients to undergo thorough health examinations will have a chance to set a good example at this convention. A group of diagnostic experts will be in attendance to examine the doctors themselves very thoroughly, along the lines of general physical condition, heart, lungs, digestive tract, nerves, eye, ear, nose and throat, X-ray, blood, excretions, secretions and everything else it takes to round out the thorough structural examination of the body machine which is the basic part of all osteopathic diagnosis.

Dr. Wilderson is a graduate of the American School of Osteopathy in 1899.
